THE POLITICAL CAULDRON.

HOW THE VARIOUS CONTESTS GO MERRILY ON.

Another Rally for Monday Night—Quincy and Fitzgerald the Speakers—Brady and Foss—Fifield, Knox and Others.

On Monday evening the democracy of Lowell will have an opportunity to listen to two able speakers, one Hon. Josiah Quincy the most astute politician in Massachusetts. He is a true exponent of the democratic doctrine although a calm dispassionate speaker. He appeals wholly to the reason and judgment by strong arguments and he fails to convince.

The other speaker will be Senator John F. Fitzgerald who was a co-worker with Hon. Peter Brady in the senate during the past year. It is expected there will be a large attendance.

***

Mr. Editor:—I desire to say that George Kearns is a candidate for the council from Ward Five. He is a very popular young man who has always taken a lively interest in politics and in the success of the democratic party. This is his first venture as a candidate. He has consented to run at the request of his friends and will undoubtedly poll a large vote at the caucus. He is a delivery clerk for P. Dempsey and one of the brightest young men in the ward. He would be a strong man on the ticket.

Yours truly,
WARD FIVE.

***

The legislative record of Hon. Peter J. Brady and Rep. Foss is sufficient for the friends of labor. The members of labor organizations who want as many representatives as possible in the legislature should be careful not to do anything that will aid in Mr. Foss's election, because he has taken no interest in labor organizations. The populist candidates complain of unfair treatment at the hands of the press and they say that this is done by papers claiming to be friendly to labor. Most decidedly so. No paper that is friendly to labor will advocate the election of populists because that would be absolutely useless, and it is rather unfortunate for the labor organizations of the city that they are so closely connected with the populist movement. Even a small vote cast for a populist candidate may deprive the labor organizations of a staunch friend in the legislature and elect a republican. The candidacy of certain populists in this city is as much in the interests of the republican party as anything could be and there is no use in such candidates urging that they should be supported by the friends of labor. The friends of labor should vote the straight democratic ticket if they wish to advance their own interest. To vote for populists, is to help to elect republicans who are opposed to labor reforms.

***

Thomas F. Roche, the Fayette street grocer is a candidate for overseer of the poor. He is president of the Ward Six club and will have its support.

***

Rollin W. Stickney in Ward Two is making a big fight for the nomination and has good prospects of success. He would make an excellent representative.

***

The contest for overseer of the poor in Ward Three is engaging considerable attention. Joseph Donohoe is hustling and has a strong following in every part of the ward, but he has also strong opponents in Wm. E. Dwyer, James Gorman, J. J. Gilbride and Patrick Mahan. They are all hustling.

***

Every democratic candidate in the city, no matter for what office, will aid his party by doing what he can for Sen. Brady's election. There are traitors in the ranks and a few were seen in consultation with Mr. Foss yesterday. They visit his headquarters in the Hildreth building. They are being watched, however, and may feel a little surprised to find a list of their names published in THE SUN at an early date.

***

The republicans have put up a representative candidate in Ward Six, whom, strange to say, is not well known in the ward, his name—Henry J. Fay—being confused with Messrs. Aubert J. Fay and Edgar Fay of the Opera house. Mr. Henry Fay need not worry, as the voters of that ward will elect Tom Hoban. Mr. Fay used to work for Nichols & Fletcher, but now fills a position in a Boston house. The democrats of Ward Six do not wish to take Mr. Fay away from his business engagements.

Down in Lawrence dwells a lawyer
  And his name is Knox
Down in Lawrence weeps a victim
  Of his party's hoax
For he once had been a flopper,
  Flopped whene'er he could,
Till at length outside the breast works
  Wily William stood.
He fought against the G. O. P.
  And he rallied against Blaine.
This mountebank in politic must be
  Defeated once again.
Let the laborers come out
  And stand against their foe
For their foe is Knox no doubt
As the Lawrence people know.
  As "the bread and butter brigade"
All the toilers he satired
  In a speech that once he made
Ere to congress he aspired.

WHAT'S GOING TO HAPPEN NOW?

Lowell Sportsmen Take Notice.

A well known local nimrod and gunner remarks to THE SUN that the Lowell hunters who bring home doe after a hunting trip to Maine ought to go out of business.

True sportsmen will give a hunter credit in bringing down a buck, but to kill doe is a sin and should almost be considered a crime. Many doe have been exhibited here this fall.

Down Come Bicycle Charges.

The latest cut in the price of bicycles is the second one of $25 in two years, and probably the end is not yet. It is quite likely that the not distant future will witness as big a reduction in the price of the wheel as has already been seen in the price of the sewing machine.—Herald.

CANNOT ACCEPT IT.

Manager Brady Speaks of the Offer of the New York Company.

W. A. Brady, the manager of the champion Corbett, stated last night that he could not accept the offer of the kinetoscope company, as he would have to forfeit to the Jacksonville club.

"If the latter club" said Brady "threw up the fight the company would have as good a show as any one to get it, but the battle would have to take place in America. No Mexico for us. I know what that country is."

"Supposing that Fitz accepts the offer, would Corbett do so?"

"No," said Brady, "we will not switch from the articles."

THE EX-PRESIDENTS.

Were Remembered by Badges From Waverly Lodge.

Waverly lodge, Sons of St. George, had an interesting session at Post 185 hall, last evening, and the following presidents for 12 years were presented with beautiful badges:

Harris, Fred Pickles, Samuel Holgate, John D. Willman, Joseph Sutcliffe, Albert Stopherd, James Rothwell, Frank Pascall, James Howard, Wm. B. Jackson, Thomas Gardiner, Thomas Howard, and Mark Nobie.

After the presentation a smoke talk with songs and speeches. The lodge has made extensive preparations for the celebration of its 12th anniversary on next Friday evening in Odd Fellows' hall.

THE LIQUOR LAW

And Its Non-Enforcement Causes a Mild Sort of an Uprising in Lynn.

A sensation has been sprung in Lynn, in connection with the efforts of the Lynn Temperance Reform union, an organization of ministers and church members, to secure enforcement of the prohibitory law.

Lynn is a no-license city, but liquor can be had almost as openly as under license, the hotels doing a rushing business and two at least employing three bar tenders steadily.

The Lynn Temperance Reform union has taken decisive steps and proposes to compel the authorities to enforce the law. Within the past two weeks three young women of eminently respectable character Miss Agnes Talbot, Miss Sophia Webber, and Miss Meda Clifford, all church members, have visited all the hotels in Lynn.

At but three did they find difficulty in purchasing liquor.

In five hotels they were admitted, shown to private rooms and liquor furnished them. The liquor they preserved in the bottles and took it away with them.

They are prepared to identify those who sold them the drinks in each place, and further declare that they were told that women were welcome and invited to come again.

This evidence has been laid before Mayor Harwood and he has been asked to take action in the matter.

So far nothing has been done. The Temperance Reform union is indignant at this and threatens to call in the aid of the state police if the law is not strictly enforced in Lynn.

Here he found all the members seated around the festive board ready to enjoy a real Scottish lunch. Mr. Moir joined them and when the good things were partaken of Chief Hastings arose and presented to Mr. Moir a beautiful easy chair. Mr. Moir returned his thanks. Before dispersing the party drank a toast to Mr. and Mrs. Moir.

Commissioner For Quebec Whom the Quebec Authorities Say is Unauthorized—Young Man Arrested for Theft—Woman Looking for Her Satchel.

A man named George St. Germain occupying apartments at the corner of Merrimack and Cabot streets, has a shingle outside his door bearing the inscription: "Commissionaire de Province Quebec." Commissioner of Quebec, and has been doing business as such, taking affidavits, etc. These commissioners are authorized by the provincial government, and to do business without an appointment is a criminal offence. Some Lowell parties wrote to the government recently, it is said, and Lawyer Grillet has received a letter from Quebec stating that no such name as St. Germain is on its list of authorized commissioners.

Have You Seen the Satchel?

Mrs. Julia C. Daly of Boston while hurrying to catch the 9.25 train, Thursday evening, having been attending the A. M. She has notified the police to look it up for her.

Home Rule Assured.

Those who think that the home rule movement is dead should digest the following note from Justin McCarthy:

A correspondent having written to Mr. Justin McCarthy, M. P., drawing his attention to a passage in Mr. Courtney's recent speech at Hessen Ford, has received the following reply:

Oct. 8, 1894.

Dear Sir:—Mr. Courtney is quite mistaken. The desire for home rule is absolutely inextinguishable among the Irish people. The carrying of a home rule measure is as certain as anything in human affairs can be—as certain, let us say, as the rising of tomorrow's sun.

Very truly yours,
JUSTIN MCCARTHY.

Merry Party in Associate Hall in Which the Young People Danced to Their Heart's Content.

The second grand social of the Ingrain weavers was held in Associate hall, last evening, and attracted a large number of young people, just as does every affair managed by the weavers.

In the upper hall ice cream, cake and coffee were served and three tents were pitched for fortune tellers who solved the mysteries of the young people's lives to their entire satisfaction.

From 8 to 9 o'clock Hibbard's orchestra gave a delightful concert after which dancing commenced. Owing to the large crowd, there was no march.

VON CAPRIVI GOES

Resigns as Premier on Account of Socialism.

EMPEROR WILLIAM ACCEPTS IT AND ANOTHER ONE.

Count Botho Zu Elenberg Steps Down and Out.

BERLIN, Oct. 27.—Chancellor von Caprivi and Count Botho Zu Eulenberg, president of the Prussian council of ministers, have resigned. It is known that for some time past there has been considerable tension between the chancellor and Count Zu Eulenberg, owing to the former's views in regard to the measures to be submitted to the Reichstag for the repression of socialism. The chancellor is in favor of pursuing a moderate policy, while Count Zu Eulenberg believed in the adoption of radical measures to obtain the end sought.

COUNT VON CAPRIVI.

So many versions are current of the suddenly precipitated crisis that it would be impossible to form a definite conclusion until the matter has further developed. Yesterday's outward events were as follows: After the services in the Russian chapel, which were attended by both Emperor William and Count von Caprivi, the emperor gave an audience to the chancellor at the castle at 2 o'clock. A quarter of an hour later, Count Zu Eulenberg had an audience with the emperor, and at 2:30 the emperor received Count Lechenfield, the Bavarian minister here; Count Hoenthal of Saxony, Baron von Buler of Wurtemberg and Dr. Jagen of Baden, all ministers of their respective countries.

Before his majesty received these ministers, both Count von Caprivi and Count Zu Eulenberg had resigned. Reports differ as to when, some saying that Count Zu Eulenberg resigned Tuesday, and that the emperor ineffectually tried to induce him to withdraw his resignation. It should be noted that Count Philip Zu Eulenberg, Count Botho's brother, is an intimate friend of the emperor.

Great Excitement Prevails.

The first intimation to the public of the crisis was the official announcement that the emperor had postponed his journey to Blankenberg. Any politician who had told in the morning that such a crisis was impending would have been laughed at. The greatest excitement was created when the events became known.

Numerous candidates are mentioned as successor to Count von Caprivi. Besides those already mentioned Baron von Zeedlitz is talked off. It cannot, however, be stated that any of those whose names have been mentioned have any prominent claims. It is asserted that the emperor has a "dark horse."

Count von Caprivi is said by his intimate friends to be glad to escape from the cares of the chancellorship. He is a moderate man, opposed to extreme views of any kind. Therefore, he is well hated in many quarters. The intrigues against him on the part of the Bismarckians and agricultural party have been bitter. He often expressed a desire to retire to military life, and only remained in office from a sense of duty to his country. He will, in a few days, proceed to Geneva for his health.

His persistent enemies have cause for self-congratulation, but the situation is regarded with great apprehension. It is believed that the emperor secretly favors strong repressive measures against the socialists and Poles, despite his expression of approval of Count von Caprivi's policy, and that the next chancellor will be called upon to introduce such measures. If so, stormy times are in store in the reichstag.

The emperor is credited with being much annoyed by the papers expressing such liberal approval of Count von Caprivi's policy. Any way, the latter's disappearance means a radical change in Germany's internal policy.

Caprivi's Career.

General Count Georg Leo von Caprivi de Caprera de Monte-Cuccuii succeeded Prince Bismarck as chancellor of the German empire shortly after the latter's retirement in March, 1890. He was born at Charlottenberg in 1831, being the son of a high legal functionary in the service of Prussia. He entered the army in his 18th year, and won rapid promotion. He served with distinction in the campaigns of 1864 and 1866, and in the Franco-Prussian war he acted as chief of staff to the Tenth corps.

Swiftly ascending the other steps of the military ladder, he was appointed in 1883 to the command of the Thirtieth division at Metz. The next year he passed at a single bound from the army to the navy, succeeding Herr von Stitch on the latter's retirement from the head of the admiralty. In a short time naval men by profession were amazed at the mastery of their arts and the perception of their interests which were displayed by a mere landsman and soldier-like general, Von Caprivi. His administration proved at least that he was a man with a rare power of adapting himself to new modern lines of activity.

Soon after the present emperor's accession, the navy was reorganized and General von Caprivi was appointed to the command of the Tenth Army corps, the command of the imperial fleet being vested in Admiral von der Goltz. During maneuvers in the autumn of 1889, the emperor had a good opportunity to study the character of Von Caprivi, and later he was asked to accept the chancellorship. He was not anxious to accept the position, but his scruples and self-distrust were finally overcome, and he assumed the office which he has now resigned.

During his term of office he has had several severe contests with the reichstag, in all of which he has come out victorious. Among his later parliamentary struggles were the fights to secure an increase of the army and the adoption of commercial treaties. He was forced to make concessions on both measures, but the bills were finally passed to the satisfaction of the government, it being generally believed that Count von Caprivi had asked for more than he knew would be granted to him in order to make the concessions that were sure to be demanded.

His fight for a commercial treaty with Russia brought upon himself a fierce onslaught, and resulted in the formation of what is known as the agrarian party. The adoption of the treaty was opposed by every known political method, but in the end Count von Caprivi had the satisfaction of seeing the convention adopt it.

His fight to prevent the views of extremists in regard to the proper measures to be adopted against socialists and socialism prevailing is of too recent date to need extended mention. He insisted upon the adoption of a moderate policy, and it is said that the emperor agreed with him.

Count Zu Eulenberg is reported to have strenuously opposed anything but radical measures, and several times it has been reported that the difference of opinion between himself and the chancellor would lead to the resignation of one or both. It is surmised that this is the question which has at last led to the resignation of both.

Speculation is already rife as to Count von Caprivi's possible successor. Dr. Miquel, General Bronsart von Schellndorf, minister of war, and General Count von Waldersee are spoken of, but hope or fear is chiefly father of the thought. Until something more definite is known of the causes of the crisis, there can be no solution.

The Tageblatt declares that the astonishment caused by the resignations is equally great among the friends and the foes of the ex-chancellor and the ex-Prussian premier.

The newspapers here are only able to give conflicting conjectures as to the real cause of the crisis.

Some Are Alive.

IRON MOUNTAIN, Mich., Oct. 27.—The only fact established is that a number of the men imprisoned at the Pewabic mine are alive. Whom and how many will not be known until late today. Communication was established by means of hammering rocks. The men are well supplied with air. They have now been imprisoned over 40 hours. Superintendent Brown is certain that at least eight of the men have escaped uninjured, but fears there may have been many caught under the falling walls and crushed to death. Around the shaft are gathered large crowds of relatives.

The three button cutaway frock suit, is more of a favorite this fall than for several seasons. Very reasonably so, too, for the new cutaway from Rogers, Peet & Co. is a graceful and dressy garment.

We've half a dozen weaves and qualities of black undressed worsteds and serges besides an excellent assortment of the fashionable fancy worsteds in these new cutaways.

The serges are dressy enough to take the place of "Clay" diagonals, without being too dress-up for business, $12 to $30 a suit.

Traction company, who mysteriously disappeared from that city on Sunday afternoon, Oct. 7, was located in this city yesterday afternoon, after the New York authorities had sent out a general alarm upon the request of his wife.

He showed the effects of a prolonged spree but was perfectly clear and coherent in his statement, which was that while under the effects of liquor he went back to his office, opened the safe and took out $1500, which he spent in Jersey City and Port Jervis.

He was taken back to Bridgeport at midnight.

Armed Men Trying to Capture Men Who Shot an Officer.

By Associated Press to THE SUN.

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., Oct. 26.—Policeman Marcellus was fatally shot, yesterday afternoon, while trying to arrest three tramps in a store in the East end. After firing 20 shots in the store, the tramps took to the woods.

Aid was summoned from the city, and 150 men armed with rifles started in pursuit with instructions to bring them back, dead or alive. The woods are wild and swampy. Darkness favored the escape of the tramps, and most of the searching party returned at 7 o'clock with no hopes of discovering the men last night. A few were left there on picket duty.

For Governor:

HON. JOHN E. RUSSELL of Leicester.

For Congressman:

HON. GEO. W. FIFIELD of Lowell.

For Senator:

HON. PETER J. BRADY of Lowell.

THE COURTS decide that Pullman is not a common carrier and therefore relieve him of a great many suits in which heavy damages were expected. Pullman should have been held responsible for much of the damage done by the strike or lockout in his works.

HON. JOSIAH QUINCY and Senator Fitzgerald will speak here on Monday evening. They will get a rousing reception. Mr. Fitzgerald was a co-worker with Hon. Peter J. Brady and can tell how hard he worked for the cause of labor and for Lowell's interests in the normal school matter.

IN THE aldermanic precedent established at the last meeting in the refusal to license an itinerant clothing hawker, be followed it will benefit the merchants of Lowell. It is a protection against dishonesty, against selling shoddy goods under false pretences, against swindling the community. It is to be hoped that the precedent will be followed.

EVERYBODY INTERESTED in the senatorial fight should read the records of Brady and Foss. The latter voted for the telephone swindle which was vetoed by Governor Greenhalge the former voted against that measure. Foss was absent at 84 out of 121 roll calls, Brady 18 out of 170 and those because he was on a tour of inspection with the prison and labor committees.

THE CALAMITY speakers say that good times have not returned, that they will not return until the republicans be restored to power. According to Reed and McKinley the g. o. p. can create wealth and distribute it throughout the land. God is the only creative power in existence and Hon. John E. Russell demonstrates that wealth cannot be created by law. It is produced by labor.

POINTS OF MR. RUSSELL'S ADDRESS.

Hon. John E. Russell in his speech at Huntington hall, on Thursday evening, worked in some nuggets of political philosophy that are well worth remembering.

His refutation of the fallacy that any government by mere legislation can create wealth was a blow to the arguments of Reed and McKinley. The sources of wealth are the soil, the mines and the fisheries. The government does not work any of these and cannot, therefore, create wealth.

He also exposed the fallacy of Evarts as to this day advocated by republicans, that if the few be made rich by government bounties and high protective duties, they will share their wealth with the poor. In this country where Carnegie, Pullman the Vanderbilts, and Goulds practically do as they please, where they control legislation, where the wealth is accumulated in the hands of the few as in no other country of the world, there is everywhere the most convincing proofs of the falsity of this claim.

Republicans are today coming around to the doctrine that duties should be levied for no other purpose than revenue. John Sherman has preached that doctrine for years, he is now preaching it in Ohio, and Reed and other republicans are abandoning the McKinley platform to accept the same theory.

This is a result of the democratic proclamation of this principle which is sure to be embodied in the platform of the republican party at no distant date.

No presidential election in this country was carried on the issue of raising protective duties; but several elections have been carried on the issue of reducing duties. The advancement of duties is not so injurious to the country as the ordeal of reducing them afterwards, because by this means unnecessary bounties are taked away from various industries which should live without government support.

Another point made clear by Mr. Russell was, that in free trade countries nearly all the labor strikes are for an increase of wages while in the United States most strikes are against reductions. This is another proof of the greed of American monopolists. They control legislation, they control the markets and when protected in these iniquities they can afford to dispise labor organizations.

Panics do not come suddenly, they are caused by a disordered currency, by a reduction in the price of agricultural products or by wild speculation. The panic now passing away was precipitated by the Sherman silver law, but the repeal of that law did not effect a complete cure. The causes were deeper laid than that. It had its foundation in republican legislation, in excessive protection for certain industries, in the currency laws and various resultant causes.

Overproduction is a great cause of dull times. The home market has not a sufficient vent for the goods manufactured. If Fall River or any city suffering from an overstocked market could send its supplies to Europe, India, China and Africa, it could easily dispose of as much as would cause a greater activity in the cotton mills. An instance occurred in which the Fall River mills opened an office in Manchester, England, and there disposed of their surplus stock. If the same could be done now or if America could enter the markets of the world as does England, business would be better than it is or than it will be in the near future.

One thing emphasized by Mr. Russell will be readily admitted by every labor agitator in the state. Although the republicans have a majority in the house and senate, and although they often make great protestations of zeal for the interest of labor, yet they have never passed a single labor reform bill that was not extorted from them by long and persistent hammering of democrats. That shows very clearly how important it is to have democrats in the legislature even though in a minority. They yet succeed in securing the passage of needed reforms. This should be an incentive to vote for Hon. Peter J. Brady and Hon. George W. Fifield, both of whom can be implicitly relied upon to advocate the labor reforms to be pushed to the front in the near future.

TRUE LOYALTY.

Here is the Catholic idea of true Americanism as expressed by Archbishop Ireland:

"The individual who does not in his own name and from his own heart proclaim his right of liberty for his fellow-citizen is no true son of America, and he should quickly hie himself away from her shores.

"The country entrusts to you the defence of true Americanism. Banish from the social and political life of the country all strife of race and creed. Allow but one test—Americanism—loyalty to the public weal on the battle field and at the polls.

"Religious prejudice is a boomerang which returns upon him who launches it. The cry of religious prejudice unfortunately has been raised, and in it there is often, I believe, more politics than religion. It should be put down. American loyalty and fitness for office—these must ever be, and these alone, the conditions which determine an American's vote. In this matter, as in all other questions of American citizenship, the veteran soldier will be first in the pathway of honor and duty."

FAR DISTANT WORLDS.

They Give a Faint Idea of the Immeasurable Immensity of Space.

Galileo, in his "Sidereal Messenger," made a map of 80 new stars which he had discovered in the constellations of Orion's Belt and the "Sword," and since then astronomer after astronomer, as is well known, has added various groups and galaxies to the 2,000 or 3,000 conspicuous stars of the first six magnitudes which can be always seen with the naked eye. It is curious and not complimentary to the good sense of mankind that those stars should have been looked upon as merely intended to spangle the sky and give light at night. As lamps they were always a failure. Sixty times the total starlight on the clearest night would not equal the illumination given by the moon; 38,000,000 times their radiance would be required to equal sunlight. Yet the stars which are seen even by a powerful telescope are now known to be only an insignificant proportion of those actually existing inside "visible space."

Telescopic photography as practiced today in all the observatories reveals in apparently every blank region of the celestial sphere countless new and distant worlds, lying far beyond all methods of mortal computation and measurement. The only footrule with which we can at all estimate the scale of distances in the "visible universe" is light. This travels along the ether at the rate of 186,000 miles in a second, so that the ray which we receive from the sun left his surface eight minutes before it has reached our eyes.

By ingenious processes, based on complex arithmetic, astronomers have determined the distance of about 80 stars, and the nearest of all of them to our system is Alpha Centauri. The radiance of this star takes, however, about four years to reach human vision, while that which we perceive from Alpha Tauri or Aldebaran was projected from its glittering source 27 years ago, and most of those seen deeper in the night sky are so far off that their present light left them 300 or 400 years back. Many are today visible whose beams have traveled to our gaze only after a lapse of thousands of years, and there must be radiant streams now on their way from heavenly bodies in the empyrean which will only reach the eyes of our very far off posterity.—Sir Edwin Arnold in North American Review.

She was so out of heart, she returned the answer that it would be like all the rest—of no good; but on my account, she said she would try it, so I got one bottle each; and before she had used half of a bottle she felt that it was benefiting her, and she has continued to improve ever since, and now thinks it the most wonderful remedy on earth for her sex, and recommends it to all suffering females. SERIES OF USEFUL "HOWS."

HOW TO STOP WHAT IS KNOWN AS NAIL BITING.

This Habit Can be Easily Stopped in Early Years—It is a Sign of Instability of Character—How to Sterilize Milk For Children.

The practice of nibbling at the finger nails is to be condemned, first, on the ground that the nails are thereby rendered brittle and unsightly, and, secondly, because it is senseless and the practice of it a source of constant irritation to the friends of any one who does it.

A child can be broken early in years. Thus it is usually sufficient to explain to the child the pernicionsness of the habit, requesting him to be constantly watchful against it in himself and to discourage the practice in every one else. Punishment is usually uncalled for.

Strategy may be resorted to in case the habit be well established. The finger ends may be dipped in some harmless preparation of a disagreeable or bitter nature, which will serve to remind the child what he is doing.

Among the school children of Paris the habit is widely prevalent. Of the total number of children examined, about one-third were given to the practice, the greater proportion being among the girls. The age at which the habit was most common was found to be between 12 and 15 years.

The investigator thinks he has discovered a remarkable relation between nail biting and a defective or at least an impaired stability of mind and character, as all the teachers united in saying the pupils addicted to nail biting were the poorest students. The boys were inclined to effeminacy and the girls to slackness. Both sexes showed a loosened ability to sustain the attention and were consequently the hardest pupils to teach.

How to Sterilize Milk.

Take a tin pail and have made for it a false bottom perforated with holes and having legs half an inch high to allow circulation of the water. The bottle of milk to be treated is set on this false bottom, and the pail is filled with water until it reaches the level of the surface of the milk in the bottle. A hole may be punched in the cover of the bottle, in which a cork is inserted, and the thermometer is put through the cork, so that the bulb dips into the milk, and the temperature can thus be watched without removing the cover. This water is then heated until the milk reaches a temperature of 155 degrees F., when it is removed from the heat and allowed to cool gradually. A temperature of 150 degrees maintained for half an hour is sufficient to destroy any germs likely to be present in the milk, and it is found in practice that raising the temperature to 150 degrees and then allowing it to stand in the heated water until cool insure the proper temperature for the required time.

How to Wave the Hair as at Present Worn.

The hair must no longer be crimped, but must be laid over the head in large natural looking waves. The secret lies in the fact that the iron is no longer applied to the tip of the tress, and the hair wound over it, but the tress, of the hair itself is wound around the iron, beginning as near the scalp as it is comfortable to hold the heated iron. The parting of the hair, which proved so unpopular when it was first introduced, has been accepted chiefly by those persons of a Madonna type of face, for they can bear this severe style of hairdressing. The delicate fringe of curls which so many maidens still continue to wear is too becoming to the majority of American girls to be driven out of fashion.

How to Acquire Lightness of Step.

Let a girl walk about a room on tiptoes, at times balancing a book or sofa pillow on her head, for dignity. If this is done for a half hour each day for a year, she will walk like a queen forever after. A heavy step and downcast eyes prevent grace, lightness or dignity.

How to Remove Different Stains.

Salts of lemon succeed where most things fail. Peach stains are very hard to remove, and even with the above remedy a hole is often left instead of the stain. Extreme care will prevent this. Take a sunny day for the task; first moisten the spot and then rub on a very little of the salts of lemon. Lay the linen in the sun for two or three minutes and then wash thoroughly with soap and warm water. If this does not entirely remove all discoloration, repeat the whole process. Iron rust is more easily removed. After washing the article squeeze lemon juice on the spot and then cover thickly with salt. Lay in the sun all day, wash, and if the rust is not entirely removed repeat the application. This is equally good for ink stains.

How to Make the Ribbon Harness Now In Use.

This "harness" is a revived fashion. It consists of brotelles or braces, starting from the belt in front under a horizontal bow and passing over the shoulders, where they are tied in fanciful knots, then down the back to meet two rosettes at the belt. The novelty is to continue the shoulder ribbons both front and back to the bottom of the skirt, each end being finished with a large square bow, the long ends flying out with every motion.

How to Serve an "Everyday" Meal.

Family meals should be so well served each day that no effort will be apparent when company is present. The servant should be taught to pour water, pass plates and observe the guests' wants without aid from her mistress. There should be no noise or clashing of plates or glasses, and the courses should be remove without a word. When the dessert is placed on table, the glasses should be filled and plates passed, and the servant should then retire.

The Bloomer Girl.

Oh, I'll not sigh for the social girl!
Over me she'll hold no sway.
But I'll give all to the bloomer girl.
Her wheel shall have right of way.
Oh, bloomer girl, sweet bloomer girl, smooth may thy pathway be!
Your costume is more handsome than the finest robes we see.

Oh, I won't bet on the sporty girl,
Won't even play her for place,
But to win I'll pick the cycling girl
On my heart she sets the pace.
The bloomer girl, sweet bloomer girl, foremost she'll always be.
Oh, she goes and leads in a whirl! She is the girl for me.

Oh, I've no thoughts for the tennis girl,
With her skilled and artful poise,
But I think lots of the bloomer girl
On the wheel that makes no noise.
The bloomer girl, sweet bloomer girl, as cute as cute can be,
And looking far more attractive than any girl we see.

Oh, I don't care for the seashore girl!
She's a skinny, freckled fright.
But the dancing, bouncing bloomer girl
I love with all my might!
Oh, bloomer girl, sweet bloomer girl, moved by what I can see,
If ever I get married, to a bloomer girl 'twill be!

FOUND IT WAS ONLY A DREAM.

The Tramp's Vision of Existence Under the Brotherhood of Man.

Hungry and Tired He Wandered Into a Chicago Populist Meeting—Its Speakers and Atmosphere Carried Him Away—Facing Reality Without Breakfast.

A man stood on the corner of the street watching a procession of American citizens marching with torches and banners to the patriotic music of a brass band. He was not well dressed, not even clean, and his eyes had a hungry gleam in them. Perhaps I should not have said "man," since he was evidently that peculiar nineteenth century production so inspiring to cheap wits and plutocratic newspapers—the tramp. He was still hunting work and had sadly deteriorated in the process. He mechanically followed the long procession and entered with them. The building, he afterward learned, was Central Music hall. It was filled to the dome with restless, enthusiastic humanity, such a crowd as he had never before seen.

The chairman arose and began a few words of introduction. As he spoke a tall, slender, quiet man advanced to the front of the stage. No further words of the chairman could be heard. The audience, with one impulse, rose to their feet and the occasion. They shouted, clapped, stamped, waved hats and handkerchiefs until the great organ fairly rumbled in response. Moments went on. The cheering continued, rose in louder waves, receded, swelled again and yet again. Meanwhile the quiet man stood before them, serene and smiling, waiting for a chance to be heard. At last the noise subsided, and he began. "Three cheers for Debs!" called out an unsatisfied admirer, and again the dome quivered with volumes of sound sent up to it.

It mattered not what Debs said. It was the man Debs—the man maligned, persecuted and prosecuted for possessing human sympathies—they wanted. To see him was enough. His every word was cheered, and they were few, for two overflow meetings waited to hear him. The tramp, away back in a corner, began to feel the warm magnetism of sympathetic contact with enthusiastic human beings pleading his cause. He forgot he was hungry and homeless. Another man was introduced who received a scarcely less rapturous ovation than the first. To his clear, simple words he listened with closest attention. The easy, narrativelike style of the speaker held him closely to the last. Who that has ever listened to Ignatius Donnelly wonders at it? Soaring with his imaginative flight to the planet Mars, and wondering with the wise scientists there whose telescopes allow them to see all that passes on earth, but not to hear, why so many mills and factories are silent, so many men idly wandering about, why so many granaries and storehouses are full, and so many people have nothing, our tramp learned for the first time that good and learned men thought these things wrong as well as himself.

It was a great experience for the tramp. His brain was not stupid, only torpid. He was not hopelessly ignorant, only untaught. To be told that his wants and wishes were natural and right and that justice demanded he should have an opportunity to satisfy them was to have the old, inbred code of morals upset within him. He scarcely noticed when the crowds began to pour out of the great hall, not even when the lights were lowered, and only when the corridors began to echo strangely to a few straggling footsteps did he rouse from his reverie. The usher who passed through the gallery did not see him crouched in a corner next to the wall, and presently doors below and around him began to clang, the last footfall died away, and the darkness of midnight shut him in.

Then he vaguely thought he would get up and try to find his way to the street. He groped along, stumbled against a small open door, found himself in a narrow passage, dimly lighted he reasoned not how, and followed it, not knowing what else to do. It was inexplicably long, he happened to think presently, and as he did so he noticed a door standing ajar, which opened into a pleasant garden. He stepped out and was surprised to find himself on a large lawn, where fountains were playing, flowers blooming and soft music floating out from some invisible source. Beautiful women and handsome men in artistic dress were grouped about conversing, walking, playing games or reading.

"I've run into some nabob's ranch, and if they see me they'll set the cops after me," thought the tramp. So he watched the pleasant scene from behind some shrubbery until, sadly satiated with seeing and not sharing, he turned away into a secluded path. Soon he met two well dressed young men, who smilingly accosted him:

"Hello, comrade! Just come in from a walking trip? You haven't had time to rest up and dress yet, I suppose?"

"Why, you don't know me?" he stammered.

"Ha, ha!" laughed one. "I suppose you belong on the earth and can't be so much of a stranger. Queer taste you have to choose to wear such clothes, and you must have struck some strange wilderness not to have been able to change them before they got so worn and soiled."

"I've been in some strange places, but in the best I couldn't find a chance to change these clothes for better ones."

A look of repulsion crept over the faces of the young men.

"It isn't possible you are one of those unnatural beings whom I have heard of, but never seen, who will not work at all?"

"Heaven knows I am anxious to work at anything if I can only earn a decent living at it."

"Then why the dickens don't you? Queer specimen, I must say."

"Did you ever try hunting a job?" the tramp asked, with a slight sneer in his tones. They broke into a hearty laugh.

"The idea of hunting a job! Well, that's rich. Two strong fellows like us—as good roadbuilders as there are in the country. Well, I guess not."

The tramp could only gaze at them in surprise. As he gazed they passed on, laughingly remarking that he must be in a hurry to get home to a bath and a clean suit of clothes.

"What! Do they mean that they actually work, and that they never hunted a job? Do they dig the ground, haul dirt, break stones, grade streets like common laborers, those young swells? It's a joke they're playing on me. I don't believe it," the tramp soliloquized as he stared after them.

But he wandered on and presently came out on a broad, white road, leading past some large, fine looking buildings that suggested machinery, though they were much better than anything he had ever seen in the way of shops. He saw a wide entrance gate standing open and concluded he would pass through. He saw great rows of splendid machinery, huge piles of unwrought iron, some partly finished castings, but no workers, and the wheels and belts were silent. He went on, up a wide flight of stairs, noting with a connoisseur's eye the perfect arrangements for work, the cleanliness the order and good ventilation. Still he saw no one. He wandered on and finally came upon two men who were trying to move a loaded cart on a small steel track. Instinctively he placed his shoulder against the car until, with their united efforts, it started.

"Thank you kindly," said one, who looked like a gentleman amusing himself in a workingman's overalls. "I wish we might persuade you to stay with us a few days," he said wistfully.

"Why, I'm willing enough. Just give me a place to sleep and enough grub to fill up on."

The gentleman looked at him with astonishment. "Where in the world did you come from? Here, you go over there to the door marked 'office.' You'll find a man there that will talk to you and be very glad to see you."

Our tramp needed no second bidding to move toward the door designated. He slowly turned the knob and carefully walked in. A fine old gentleman in his shirt sleeves, with his silk hat on the back of his head and his gray hair much tousled about, bent over some small pieces of machinery, with a worried expression on his face.

"Please, sir"—began the intruder.

"Eh? Who is it? What can I do for you?" exclaimed the old gentleman, dropping his work and quickly turning around.

"It's nobody in particular," the tramp deprecatingly said, half expecting to be sworn at for troubling the gentleman when his business should be made known. "I called to see—I didn't know but you needed some workmen."

"What! Do you mean that you want work?" exclaimed the old gentleman, coming forward to shake his visitor's hand. "Why, I'll give you anything you ask," and then he stopped as if an idea had struck him or some carefulness in dealing had occurred to his mind.

"Why, now I come to look at you, there's something familiar in your appearance, something that brings back old times. Fifty years ago, when I was a young lad in my father's works, I used to see such chaps as you hanging around, fairly begging the old man 'to give 'em a job,' as they called it. Haven't seen any like you for more than 25 years. You can't hire a man anywhere unless you give him as much as his productions come to. Just think, I've got orders in that must be filled, and not a man can be had for love or money. I've got my son and a fellow I helped once out there doing a little. If I could get two more skillful men, I'd roll up my sleeves, and we could manage to get out the orders. But I can't get them. All the co-operative factories are running full blast, for the high flown working men must all have fine houses, fine furniture, music, books, art, modern improvements—everything that used to belong exclusively to the rich—and the demand is right up to the supply. Can't get a man to work more than four hours a day either. Say they don't have to, and on what they earn they live like princes. Great state of affairs. I must admit it's safer and more reliable, and we needn't fear panics, but I can't get over the old fashioned liking for the time when employers controlled their workers, ran everything their own way, and the common herd had to be humble and suppliant. I'm bound to live out my time on the old lines. Now, you look like those old time fellows that were always out of work. How you come here I don't know, but it makes me feel good, and I'll hire you. What wages do you want?"

The tramp, bewildered and rejoiced at this harangue, was studying whether he might not, under the employer's emergency, ask $4 a day. When the rich man, fearing he was about to refuse, said: "Come, I'll give you nearly 90 per cent of what you produce. Say you'll produce about $30 worth in four hours, I'll give you $25 for the time."

The tramp started so violently that he came in sudden contact with something hard and cold. He looked up. It was so dark he could see nothing but a tiny gleam of light far away, like something shining through a crack in a distant shutter. He was lying on a floor, and his hand struck against something he thought was a seat. He was alone in the great theater, and he had only dreamed, after all.

With the coming of day he was released and sent out to hunt a breakfast at the price of three hours' hard work, where he might ponder in vain over that $25 for four hours' work; that dreamland where workers lived like princes and looked like students or artists, and to wonder if he would live to see such a state of affairs. If it looked so impossible, he asked himself why it shouldn't be true and could think of no answer.

CASES OF STERN REPRESSION.

ONE HALF OF THE WORKINGMEN TO BUTCHER THE OTHER HALF.

Laws For the Suppression of the Disinherited Should They Protest—Who Will Make and Enforce These Laws?—A Letter Which Fits the Present.

The following letter, which was written a few years ago, is especially appropriate to the conditions of today because of the fact that under instructions recently given by President Cleveland the military forces of the nation are being concentrated at or near industrial centers. The plutocratic newspapers of today, like the Bloomfield Citizen in the quoted paragraph, denounce as "socialists," "communists" and "anarchists" every workingman who engages in a strike against injustice. In the light of the experience of the past few years American workingmen should be able to absorb at once the lesson contained in the following letter:

Not many years ago a suburban newspaper, the Bloomfield (N. J.) Citizen, printed an editorial on "Labor Troubles." In some respects it was fairer to the workingmen than the average editorial in the local papers, but after enumerating some of the difficulties surrounding the settlement of the "labor question" it says:

> The presence of socialists in every large city, with newspaper teaching that "property is robbery," is another source of danger. How shall it be met? We answer in several ways—by teaching workingmen the necessity of obedience to law, by legislative enactment and by stern, repressive measures.

"Stern, repressive measures." How much does that mean? Workingmen, are you to be repressed? Who are to pass these "stern, repressive measures?" Representatives elected by workingmen—as all our representatives must be? And, when these "stern, repressive measures" have passed into law, by whom are they to be executed? By the workingmen themselves? If not, by whom? By a body of soldiers supported by the workingmen?

The man who wrote that editorial, whether he calls himself a Democrat or a Republican, has not yet learned the first principles of a people's government. He ought to study the Declaration of Independence for one day at least.

This Citizen editor says that "property and life must be protected at all hazards." True to the instincts of his class, he puts "property" first.

Would it not be a captivating sight to see The Citizen editor and all the editors who fawn on the money power, and all the ministers who preach patience to the poor and the sacredness of property to the rich, and all the lawyers and judges who echo and re-echo "vested rights," and all the landlords and railroad kings and usurers, and all the soldiers of the standing army living idly at labor's expense, and all the legislators who misrepresent the people—I say would it not be a captivating sight to see all these start out to "protect property at all hazards" and to execute their "stern, repressive measures?" But I wonder if they would realize what a puny little handful they would be compared to all the workingmen in the country who are to "'be taught the necessity of obedience to law." My friends—and now I am talking to the workingmen—do you know on whom these men depend to "protect their property at all hazards?" On you every time, directly or indirectly.

Have you heard of the northern senator who was told by a southerner that "the north had more to fear from the discontent of its laboring classes than ever the south had to fear from its slaves?" And did you hear how this senator replied: "Don't trouble yourself about us. If worse comes to worst, we can hire one-half of the workingmen to butcher the other half?" True, and so whenever I hear editors or workingmen talk of violence I am sad and troubled. We want such intelligence and unity, such a feeling of brotherhood among the world's workers that no man will dare to advocate "stern, repressive measures," thinking in his heart or saying with his lips that they can be enforced by "hiring one-half of the workingmen to butcher the other half."

I once heard of an incident bearing on this matter which always, when I think of it, fills me with a great glow of hope for the workers of our country. In 1877 a militia company, probably composed of workingmen, was called out to suppress a riotous strike. In this company was a young man—God bless him—who said: "I'll go, captain, but I shall hand my musket over to the strikers if I do anything. Do you think I can go in the interest of a corporation and shoot down men who are asking for a living for themselves and families?" The threat of "court martial" made no difference to this hero, who was brave enough not to fight. Suppose every man in every company that was called out to suppress those strikers had acted like this one.

What is needed to drive tyranny out of the world and forever emancipate the many from bondage to the few is to so educate the many that every tyrant will know that he cannot "hire one-half of the workingmen to butcher the other half."

Let every tyrant know that no man can be hired to be a human butcher, either as sheriff or soldier, and our freedom is won, for it is on hirelings that tyranny has always depended to carry out its "stern, repressive measures."

The Parsons case went to the jury after eleven o'clock Lawyer Courtney for the defendant argued that Mrs. Nevins was drunk on the night in question and might have lost the money.

Fred Donnelly was fined $20 for embezzlement.

H. M. Brown of Worcester was sentenced to the house of correction for one year for false pretences.

John McManus who pleaded guilty to the indictment against him for adultery was fined $20.

Nagaire Riapelle pleaded guilty of drunkenness and was placed on probation. Frank Goodnow was also placed on probation.

All other cases were taken to Cambridge and both juries were instructed to report there on Monday.

Henry Lynch who pleaded guilty to the charge of breaking and entering J. F. Prescott's store, was placed on probation at the request of his counsel, W. A. Hogan, Esq.

District Attorney Weir made a motion to forfeit the bond of Mary McKenna in the case of Joseph Logue, the alleged embezzler from the Foresters who skipped out of town. Mrs. McKenna is his surety and, according to Lawyer Donahue who appeared in her interest, is a poor woman who by her own hard labor has accumulated a little fortune which only equals the amount of the bond, and should it be forfeited, she would be left without a cent in the world. The court let the matter go over till the end of the month.

Spoke Against Liquor Dealers.

Matthew Gillis has a liking for strong drink and according to his wife's story as told Judge Hadley today, has been neglecting his family. Matthew said that he drank but thought he could get over it. Judge Hadley said he liked to see a man acknowledge his error and promise to do better. There is no disgrace to that; it is honorable. When a man drinks he deprives his family of the amount of money he spends for liquor. He turns it right into the hands of men who do not care for him, only to make themselves rich. He then told Matthew and his wife to try to come to some understanding and settle matters between them.

Street Watering Assessments.

OFFICE OF THE CITY TREASURER AND COLLECTOR OF TAXES.

LOWELL, MASS., OCT. 26, 1894.

In view of the fact that there appears to be a general misunderstanding concerning the item for watering streets which appears on the tax bills of 1894, the following explanation is respectfully offered:

The law governing the watering of streets, provides that all assessments remaining unpaid for the year in which such assessments are laid, shall be included in the next annual tax bills against the several estates, and shall be considered a part of the annual taxes.

By this peculiar provision of the law, unpaid street watering assessments of 1893 appear on the tax bills of the year 1894, and are being paid as a part of the same.

The bills for watering streets for the year 1894 are being distributed, and many taxpayers naturally protest under the belief that they have already paid their street watering assessments with their annual taxes, when in reality they paid the street watering assessment for 1893 and their real estate tax for 1894 on one bill.

Bills for watering streets for 1894 are now due and payable. By resolution of the City Council, interest at the rate of seven per cent. per annum will be charged on all such bills remaining unpaid Nov. 1, 1894, until the same are paid.

The amount of all street watering bills for 1894, which remain unpaid Aug. 1, 1895, together with interest on the same, will be certified to the assessors, who will add the same to the tax bills of 1895.

ON RISING TIDE.

Of Popularity Safely Sails a Well Known Local Furnishing House.

The old tongue worn sayings that "time and tide wait for no man," and "there is a tide in the affairs of men which, taken at the flood leads to success," are somehas just appropriate to the growth of the furnishing house of Gookin Bros. From small beginnings they have built up a great business, until now they are the largest strictly furnishing house in the city.

The key to success which has unlocked the world of finance to them was small profits and as the firm grew it launched out in broader fields and cut down the margins of profit because by larger purchases they made better and closer bargains. If you need anything in furniture be sure and call at the store on Prescott street and place your order with them.

The Needlework Classes.

People's club, women's branch, the following classes will begin during the first week of November: Class in plain sewing; class in button-holes; embroidery class; class on dress-making with the use of a chart; millinery class. Those who wish to join any class must buy tickets in advance from the librarian who can be found every evening at the rooms of the club in Wyman's exchange at the corner of Merrimack and Central streets. The small fee required for tuition places these classes within reach of all.

The class in plain sewing is the most important of all, as it makes an excellent preparation for the other classes.

Pupils in this class have always found the course much more interesting than the name would imply. Instruction is given in the proper methods of doing the following work: basting, back stitching, overcasting, over-seaming, hemming, running, putting patches on cotton, woolen and figured goods, half-bias felled seam, dress darning (straight tear and three-cornered tear), putting on band, making and putting in gusset and stocking darning.

Some Fistic Pointers.

Billy Smith refused to accept the offer of the Olympic club to box Johnson for $1500.

Charlie Mitchell writes that he will hereafter fight in the middleweight class and will bar Fitzsimmons.

Champion Jim Corbett wired Manager Brady yesterday not to match O'Donnell against Maher for any date earlier than the time he is to meet Fitzsimmons.

Tom Tracy, the Australian, who was beaten in Boston by Joe Walcott, is matched to meet Danny Needham for a $1500 purse at the Madison, Ill., club, Nov. 3.

Jimmy McHale, the manager of the Southwark club of Philadelphia, proposes to hold "Young Griffo" to the agreement he signed with the club to box Charley McCarthy.

Champion George Dixon stopped Joe Flynn in four rounds at Wilmington, Del., Thursday night. A crowd of Flynn's friends followed the champion and stoned him. The police had to be called to drive them away.

Jimmy Mitchell, the Philadelphia lightweight, who has not been in the ring since he was defeated by Jem Carney of England in 1887, met Charley McKeever in Philadelphia Thursday night and was defeated in the third round.

Jack Dempsey offers to return the Police Gazette middleweight championship belt that he won outright, if he is paid its value. He will then agree to fight again for the trophy against all comers. The donor probably will purchase the belt from Dempsey.

CLEVELAND IS SILENT.

Not Likely to Make a Statement In Endorsement of Hill.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—No authoritative information can be obtained here respecting the direct question as to the president's purpose to write or not to write a letter announcing his desire that all Democrats should earnestly support Democracy in New York. Nevertheless, it is the opinion of many of his friends that he will not in any way interfere in the New York campaign.

With reference to the president's registering or voting, one of his closest friends makes the statement that Mr. Cleveland had no legal residence in New York and could not lawfully register or vote there. Mr. Cleveland himself, it is understood, has said that his legal residence was in Washington. It can be stated further that, after the expiration of Mr. Cleveland's presidential term, he will not again take up his residence in New York.

APPETITE IS GOOD.

The General Condition of the Emperor of Russia Is Unchanged.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—An official bulletin issued from Livadia last night says: "During the course of the day the emperor ate. His appetite was good. He felt some weakness, but otherwise his condition was unchanged."

It is understood that Professor Grube has refused to operate upon the czar, as he declines to assume the responsibility of so doing.

The crown jewels are being forwarded to Livadia from Moscow in order to be used at the marriage of the czarowitch to Princess Alix of Hesse-Darmstadt, which ceremony has been fixed to take place on Monday next, although this date is subject to alteration in the event of unforeseen contingencies.

A General Vacation.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—The closing of the interior department will last until Monday, and employes will have a holiday until then. Those who have been particularly exposed to infection by contact with the people of the afflicted law division have been granted leave of 12 days. Offices located in other buildings will probably remain open.

Boston's Epidemic.

BOSTON, Oct. 27.—Diphtheria and scarlet fever are epidemic in certain sections of this city. At midnight last night there were in the city hospital 32 cases of diphtheria. In another ward were 29 patients suffering from both scarlet fever and diphtheria. In the epidemic hospital are 16 patients suffering from scarlet fever.

BUSINESS BOOM

A Bright Outlook For Products in General.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT SHOWN IN THE INDUSTRIALS.

Bradstreets' Review of Trade Shows Failures Steadily Decreasing.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Engrossing political excitement in many of the states caused a natural slackening in some kinds of business, but on the whole business indications are rather more favorable than they were a week ago.

Gold exports have ceased, quite a number of mills have gone into operation, and the demand for products, if not equal to that of prosperous years, is better than it has been most of the time this year.

The prices of farm products do not improve much, and there are still some strikes to resist the reduction of wages, so that the purchasing power of the people cannot have materially increased, but there is a more hopeful spirit which prompts greater activity. On the other hand, the record of past transactions is somewhat less favorable than of late.

Cotton and Cotton Manufactures.

Cotton has sold at 5.81 cents for middling uplands, and the large receipts at such low prices indicate clearly that the crop will at least be close to the largest, if not the largest, ever produced.

The anticipated settlement of difficulties at Fall River has not been realized, and at present a good many spindles and looms are idle. But strikes are temporary; a more lasting influence is the large accumulation of cotton in the world's markets, the stock of American in sight now exceeding 2,000,000 bales. It is interesting that in spite of the low price of the principal southern crop, wholesale dealers report rather more improvement in trade with the south than with any other section.

Grain and Provisions.

The wheat market is ¼ cent lower, and nothing appears to justify any important change. Western receipts have been 4,816,671 bushels, against 9,276,038 last year, and Atlantic exports only 584,265 bushels, against 1,066,666 last year.

Corn is higher, without any clear reason.

Pork is lower. Lard is 35 cents a hundred weight and hogs 40 cents lower. The contrast indicates how little the provision market depends at present on natural relations of supply and demand.

Industrials More Encouraging.

The boot and shoe industry leads in improvement, the actual shipments from the east being larger than in any previous year—for four weeks 936,016 cases, against 227,324 last year and 814,022 in 1892.

In textile industries the situation is peculiar and in many respects perplexing. It is undeniable that orders for goods are on the whole diminishing, and retail trade does not yet prompt such supplemental orders as were expected, but a good many works have found orders enough to start up for a time, some having business for several months.

The demand for wool is not as large as it has been, and while prices have scarcely changed for two weeks, sales are but 4,804,250 pounds, against 5,778,750 in 1893, and for four weeks 19,451,749 pounds, against 25,749,750 in 1892.

Prices were put down before the new tariff took effect, so that the results of foreign competition are felt mainly in reduced sales of some domestic wools. Almost nothing is doing in spring woolens for men's wear, but manufacturers are more encouraged to believe that, as to a large share of the cheaper goods, they can meet any price that foreign mills can make.

Business Failures Decreasing.

It is still, as it has been for some months, an encouraging fact that the volume of commercial failures is small. Reports for the three weeks of October cover liabilities of only $5,639,741, of which $3,620,671 were of manufacturing and $2,057,567 of trading concerns. The failures for the week were 231 in the United States, against 352 last year, and 62 in Canada, against 44 last year.

Bradstreet's Review of Trade.

Bradstreet's has this to say: No gain in business is reported from Montreal, but at Quebec City there is improvement noted among shoe manufacturers and dealers in leather.

Trade has been fair at Toronto, but mild weather is acting as a check on the sale of winter goods. At Halifax general business about equals an average at this season.

Bank clearings at Hamilton, Toronto, Montreal and Halifax aggregate $20,350,000 this week, against $19,850,000 last week, and $18,394,000 in the week a year ago.

There were 36 business failures reported in Canada this week. Last week the total was 39; one year ago it was 33, and the year before that 30.

Caught In a Storm.

COLBERG, Oct. 27.—Three torpedo boats were caught in a storm in the Baltic sea and headed for Colberger-Munde. Two of the boats were damaged in entering the harbor. The third boat ran ashore and one of the seamen aboard of her was drowned.

Died In a Chair.

AUGUSTA, Me., Oct. 27.—Dr. John M. Eveleth of Hallowell, aged 70, came to Augusta to attend a meeting of Trinity commandery. He took a seat in an anteroom, called for a drink of water, fell back in his chair and died in five minutes.

Howgate's Case.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—District Attorney Birney says that Captain Howgate will withdraw his plea of not guilty to the indictment charging him with embezzlement and will ask leave to demur to the indictment.

Given Up by Owners.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., Oct. 27.—The Falcon is still unheard of. Bowring Bros., the owners, have given her up, and it is not expected that any of the missing steamer's crew have been saved.

A Poor Man's Windfall.

SPRINGFIELD, O., Oct. 27.—James J. Wood, who was a poor carpenter, returned from Ireland yesterday with $200,000, his share of the estate of his ancestors.

Fought to a Draw.

BUFFALO, Oct. 27. — The Smith-Van Heest fight was decided a draw in the 15th round.

An Offer of $50,000.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—A letter has been forwarded by Vice President Latham of the Kinetoscope Exhibiting company to James J. Corbett and Bob Fitzsimmons, offering a purse of $50,000 for their fight, the contest to take place in Mexico, where there will be no danger of official interference.

VIOLATION OF LAW.

Northwestern Federal Office Holders Are Requested to Chip In.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—The civil service commission has received from a postmaster in Washington state a copy of a circular from the Democratic committee levying an assessment of $5 on each postmaster. It has the heading of the committee and is signed by Charles De Franco, secretary. It states that:

"The committee having under consideration the necessity and ways and means of raising funds for the campaign, have concluded that those who are enjoying the benefits of Democratic success in the past should contribute to the expenses of the present campaign. The committee have, therefore, assessed you $5."

It is stated by the commission that this circular, being sent to a person in a government building, is a violation of the law which prohibits solicitations in such buildings. A copy of a circular issued in a similar California case has been sent to the postmaster forwarding the circular from Washington state.

Many Public Bequests.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 27.—The will of Francis Buttrick, of Waltham, was filed at the probate court yesterday. Among the public bequests are the following: To the city of Waltham, $60,000 for a public library; $10,000 to the First Universalist society; $10,000 to the city of Waltham for a poor fund, and $25,000 to his wife, to be expended for charitable purposes. To his wife is left, for her own use, the old homestead and $150,000. The remainder of the estate, after the provisions of the will are carried out, is to be devoted to such charitable purposes as the executors may deem advisable.

Temperance Women Elect Officers.

SKOWHEGAN, Me., Oct. 27.—The Maine Non-Partisan Woman Christian Temperance union yesterday closed a successful convention. The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. A. C. Paul, Fort Fairfield; vice president, Mrs. A. R. A. Cushman, Auburn; general secretary, Mrs. A. L. McKeen, Belfast; recording secretary, Mrs. G. P. Porter, Oldtown; treasurer, Mrs. G. H. Denio, Bangor; assistant recording secretary, Mrs. F. H. Beal, Augusta.

Dr. Hudon Is Alive.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Oct. 27.—The Dr. Hudon whose name was mentioned in a bottle washed ashore at Old Orchard, Me., as having been lost at sea while fishing, is in this city. He left Biddeford, Me., Oct. 7. The bottle story is dated Oct. 8. Hudon claims he does not know anything regarding the bottle affair, and thinks it must have been a hoax.

Letters Only Can Be Sealed.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—Postmaster General Bissell has issued an order stating that sealed packages, other than letters in their usual and ordinary form, are not allowed to be dispatched from the United States to Canada, even though postage is prepaid at the full letter rate. This is to prevent a form of smuggling of small articles.

A Cautious Postmaster.

PORTLAND, Me., Oct. 27.—The postoffice and general store at East Deering was entered by boring holes about the lock of the door. The burglar could not find any postage stamps or money, as the postmaster takes all the government property home with him every night. Some cigars and small articles were carried away.

Crew Rescued.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Oct. 27.—Schooner Elias Runyon of Perth Amboy, N. J., started a plank when off Point Judith, began to sink rapidly and was abandoned by the crew, in small boats. The crew were picked up shortly afterward by the schooner Henry Sutton.

WHISKEY TRUST

Will Start Out on a Bran New Plan.

WHISKEY MADE FROM CORN AND MOLASSES.

Capital Stock Will Be Started at $5,000,000.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—Papers were filed at Trenton, in the secretary of state's office, yesterday, which indicate the formation of a new whisky trust. The papers comprise the articles of incorporation of a concern to be known as the Great White Spirit company, with a paid-up capital of $5,000,000, the total authorized capital being limited by the charter to $50,000,000.

The principal office and place of business of the committee outside of the state of New Jersey will be Boston, but it will carry on business in various other states and territories of the United States. The $5,000,000 capital stock of the company is divided into 50,000 shares of the par value of $100 each. Of that stock $500,000 is divided into 5000 shares of the par value of $100 each, and is to be first preferred stock and is known as "guaranteed" stock and $2,000,000 is to be divided into 20,000 shares of the par value of $100 each, which shall be second preferred stock and be called "preferred" stock, and the balance of stock, to wit, $2,500,000, is to be divided into 25,000 shares of the par value of $100 each, and shall be called "general" or "common stock." The guaranteed and preferred stocks are to receive 8 per cent per annum, cumulative; after Jan. 1, 1895, provision is made for retiring the guaranteed stock at $110. The company is to commence business on the 29th.

The Organizers and Corporators

of the company are Robert H. Dillingham of East Orange, N. J., and David M. Ripley and Edward G. Maturin of this city. Mr. Maturin is described in the articles as the subscriber for 5000 shares of the guaranteed stock, 20,000 shares of preferred stock and 24,800 shares of the common stock. Mr. Dillingham and Mr. Ripley are put down as holding 100 shares each of the common stock.

One of the men interested in the organization of the company said that it represented a combination of the New England distillers with certain New York men who had retired from the present Whisky trust. The new company, he said, owned the patents for a new process for making spirits out of molasses, and they would have distilleries in which spirits would be made from corn and molasses alongside of each other.

To develop and carry out that departure in making whisky, he said the company had acquired large sugar properties in the West Indies, and for that purpose the company was authorized to buy steamships. Two such vessels, he said, had been already bought.

Plunged to Her Doom.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—The captain of the German bark Rebecca reports that at 3 o'clock yesterday morning when off Ushant he sighted a large steamer flying signals of distress. Soon afterward the steamer went down bow foremost. The crew could be seen running about on her deck and their cries for help could be heard distinctly. The Rebecca could do nothing to save them as she was running under bare poles before a furious gale. The name of the lost steamer is not known.

A Clever Robbery.

OMAHA, Oct. 27.—The fact was made public yesterday afternoon that the safety deposit vaults section of the Omaha National bank had been robbed, and in so dexterous a manner that no clew of the manner in which the work was done is obtainable. Large sums of money have been taken. The bank officials offer no explanation other than to declare it is not due to the carelessness of the bank employes.

Didn't Work Well.

NEWPORT, R. I., Oct. 27.—Cruiser Cincinnati fired a Howell torpedo yesterday for practice. After running 400 yards it went to the bottom, and has not since been found. It also leaked out yesterday that the trial with the Howell on the Detroit ended the same way, and divers are still searching for it. Both torpedoes acting the same way is causing much unfavorable comment in naval circles.

THE POLITICAL CAULDRON.

HOW THE VARIOUS CONTESTS GO MERRILY ON.

Another Rally for Monday Night—Quincy and Fitzgerald the Speakers—Brady and Foss—Fifield, Knox and Others.

On Monday evening the democracy of Lowell will have an opportunity to listen to two able speakers, one Hon. Josiah Quincy the most astute politician in Massachusetts. He is a true exponent of the democratic doctrine although a calm dispassionate speaker. He appeals wholly to the reason and judgment by strong arguments and he seldom fails to convince.

The other speaker will be Senator John F. Fitzgerald who was a co-worker with Hon. Peter Brady in the senate during the past year. It is expected there will be a large attendance.

***

Mr. Editor:—I desire to say that George Kearns is a candidate for the council from Ward Five. He is a very popular young man who has always taken a lively interest in politics and in the success of the democratic party. This is his first venture as a candidate. He has consented to run at the request of his friends and will undoubtedly poll a large vote at the caucus. He is a delivery clerk for P. Dempsey and one of the brightest young men in the ward. He would be a strong man on the ticket.

Yours truly,
WARD FIVE.

***

The legislative record of Hon. Peter J. Brady and Rep. Foss is sufficient for the friends of labor. The members of labor organizations who want as many representatives as possible in the legislature should be careful not to do anything that will aid in Mr. Foss's election, because he has taken no interest in labor organizations. The populist candidates complain of unfair treatment at the hands of the press and they say that this is done by papers claiming to be friendly to labor. Most decidedly so. No paper that is friendly to labor will advocate the election of populists because that would be absolutely useless, and it is rather unfortunate for the labor organizations of the city that they are so closely connected with the populist movement. Even a small vote cast for a populist candidate may deprive the labor organizations of a staunch friend in the legislature and elect a republican. The candidacy of certain populists in this city is as much in the interests of the republican party as anything could be and there is no use in such candidates urging that they should be supported by the friends of labor. The friends of labor should vote the straight democratic ticket if they wish to advance their own interest. To vote for populists, is to help to elect republicans who are opposed to labor reforms.

***

Thomas F. Roche, the Fayette street grocer is a candidate for overseer of the poor. He is president of the Ward Six club and will have its support.

***

Rollin W. Stickney in Ward Two is making a big fight for the legislature and has good prospects of success. He would make an excellent representative.

***

The contest for overseer of the poor in Ward Three is engaging considerable attention. Joseph Donohoe is hustling and has a strong following in every part of the ward, but he has also strong opponents in Wm. E. Dwyer, James Gorman, J. J. Gilbride and Patrick Mahan. They are all hustling.

***

Every democratic candidate in the city, no matter for what office, will aid his party by doing what he can for Sen. Brady's election. There are traitors in the ranks and a few were seen in consultation with Mr. Foss yesterday. They visit his headquarters in the Hildreth building. They are being watched, however, and may feel a little surprised to find a list of their names published in THE SUN at an early date.

***

The republicans have put up a representative candidate in Ward Six, who, strange to say, is not well known in the ward, his name—Henry J. Fay—being confused with Messrs. Aubert J. Fay and Edgar Fay of the Opera house. Mr. Henry Fay need not worry, as the voters of that ward will elect Tom Hoban. Mr. Fay used to work for Nichols & Fletcher, but now fills a position in a Boston house. The democrats of Ward Six do not wish to take Mr. Fay away from his business engagements.

Down in Lawrence dwells a lawyer
And his name is Knox
Down in Lawrence weeps a victim
Of his party's hoax
For he once had been a flopper,
Flopped whene'er he could,
Till at length outside the breastworks
Wily William stood.
He fought against the G. O. P.
And he rallied against Blaine,
This mountebank in politics must be
Defeated once again.
Let the laborers come out
And stand against their foe
For their foe is Knox no doubt
As the Lawrence people know.
As "the bread and butter brigade"
All the toilers he satirod
In a speech that once he made
Ere to congress he aspired.

***

Thomas H. Muldoon is a candidate for the school committee in Ward One, and his friends are anxious for his success. He is making a house to house canvass and is putting in some telling work.

***

Among the council candidates in Ward One is Dennis Pendergast, one of the most popular young men in the ward. He has numerous friends who will work hard for his success.

***

For a long time the public was unable to distinguish between the pictures of Douglass, the $3 shoe man and that of our townsman, Gov. Greenhalge. But the governor has had a picture taken in a side view which the $3 shoe man cannot imitate. A similar likeness in picture, at least, exists between Pres. Cleveland and Hon. Geo. W. Fifield, our candidate for congress. Our last congressman was called "Senator," on account of spending his time with the senators on the tariff, but when Mr. Fifield goes to congress it is possible that some will mistake him for President Cleveland.

Should Learn the Law.

A driver of a wagon on Central street yesterday attempted to break through one of Undertaker O'Donnell's funerals as it passed along. He made more than one attempt and after colliding with the horses on the hearse retired. It is an offence against the law to break through a funeral cortege, and the driver was probably ignorant.

Manager Brady Speaks of the Offer of the New York Company.

W. A. Brady, the manager of Champion Corbett, stated last night that he could not accept the offer of the kinetoscope company, as he would have to forfeit to the Jacksonville club.

"If the latter club" said Brady "threw up the fight the company would have as good a show as any one to get it, but the battle would have to take place in America, No Mexico for us. I know what that country is."

"Supposing that Fitz accepts the offer, would Corbett do so?"

"No," said Brady, "we will not switch from the articles."

THE EX-PRESIDENTS.

Were Remembered by Badges From Waverly Lodge.

Waverly lodge, Sons of St. George, had an interesting session at Post 185 hall, last evening, and the following presidents for 12 years were presented with beautiful badges:

Messrs. Eli Turner, Alfred Newsholme, Wm. Barber, Benj. Rawcliffe, Walter Hurd, George Jones, David Willman, John Green, Joseph Fielding, John Orrell, Geo. H. Harris, Fred Pickles, Samuel Holgate, John D. Willman, Joseph Sutcliffe, Albert Stopherd, James Rothwell, Frank Pascall, James Howard, Wm. B. Jackson, Thomas Gardiner, Thomas Howard, and Mark Noble.

The badge is a representation of the star and garter in gold on a ground of navy blue ribbon. On the garter is inscribed in circular form, the English motto, "Honi soit qui maly pense," and at the bottom is inscribed the name of the recipient.

After the presentation a smoke talk with songs and speeches. The lodge has made extensive preparations for the celebration of its 12th anniversary on next Friday evening in Odd Fellows' hall.

THE LIQUOR LAW

And Its Non-Enforcement Causes a Mild Sort of an Uprising in Lynn.

A sensation has been sprung in Lynn, in connection with the efforts of the Lynn Temperance Reform union, an organization of ministers and church members, to secure enforcement of the prohibitory law.

Lynn is a no-license city, but liquor can be had almost as openly as under license, the hotels doing a rushing business and two at least employing three bar tenders steadily.

The Lynn Temperance Reform union has taken decisive steps and proposes to compel the authorities to enforce the law. Within the past two weeks three young women of eminently respectable character Miss Agnes Talbot, Miss Sophia Webber, and Miss Meda Clifford, all church members, have visited all the hotels in Lynn.

At but three did they find difficulty in purchasing liquor.

In five hotels they were admitted, shown to private rooms and liquor furnished them. The liquor they preserved in the bottles and took it away with them.

They are prepared to identify those who sold them the drinks in each place, and further declare that they were told that women were welcome and invited to come again.

This evidence has been laid before Mayor Harwood and he has been asked to take action in the matter.

So far nothing has been done. The Temperance Reform union is indignant at this and threatens to call in the aid of the state police if the law is not strictly enforced in Lynn.

A Gift Worth Having.

The Caledonian club entertained one of its best workers, ex-Chief George Moir last evening. The affair was a complete surprise to Mr. Moir, who, when all preparations had been made, was waited upon and escorted to the hall.

Here he found all the members seated around the festive board ready to enjoy a real Scottish lunch. Mr. Moir joined them and when the good things were partaken of Chief Hastings arose and presented to Mr. Moir a beautiful easy chair. Mr. Moir returned his thanks. Before dispersing the party drank a toast to Mr. and Mrs. Moir.

REPORTED TO THE POLICE.

CASES WHICH WILL BE HUNTED UP FOR EVIDENCE.

Commissioner For Quebec Whom the Quebec Authorities Say is Unauthorized—Young Man Arrested for Theft—Woman Looking for Her Satchel.

A man named George St. Germain occupying apartments at the corner of Merrimack and Cabot streets, has a shingle outside his door bearing the inscription: "Commissionaire de Province Quebec." Commissioner of Quebec, and has been doing business as such, taking affidavits, etc. These commissioners are authorized by the provincial government, and to do business without an appointment is a criminal offence. Some Lowell parties wrote to the government recently, it is said, and Lawyer Guillet has received a letter from Quebec stating that no such name as St. Germain is on its list of authorized commissioners.

Have You Seen the Satchel?

Mrs. Julia C. Daly of Boston while hurrying to catch the 9.25 train, Thursday evening, having been attending the A. M. A. convention was overcome and was placed in a carriage with some people who were returning from a wedding. She had a satchel with her and left it, she thinks, in the carriage. She has notified the police to look it up for her.

Arrested For Theft.

Some whitewashers did work at Mrs. Haggett's on Hurd street yesterday and after they had gone away it was discovered that some one had stolen $180, two ladies' handkerchiefs and three stickpins from the house. Inspector Laflamme and Allen arrested Fred H. Brooks who hails from Manchester, N. H. as the thief. Brooks worked with the whitewashers.

Police Court Today.

There were six drunks this morning and one was released.

James Logan and Charles Lennon who were charged with stealing $11 from Miss S. T. Joy, were held in $100 until next Friday.

John McCarthy is the name of the man who stole Brother Gardner's satchel. He was sentenced to jail for five months.

Charles Harriman was fined $5 for obstructing the street.

Andrew Crafton, for removing baggage was held in $100 until Nov. 3. Joseph Louf, for larceny will be tried Monday.

Peter C. Allen pleaded not guilty to the charge of assault and battery on John Carney and was defended by Nathan D. Pratt Esq. This alleged assault occurred in Burke's barroom on Lakeview avenue about one year ago. It was claimed that Allen while being ejected by Carney stabbed him.

Swiped the Satchel.

Brother Gardner left his carriage on Hurd street yesterday afternoon and went in to attend the services in St. Paul's church. When the good brother came out his carriage was where he left it, so was the horse, but a large satchel containing plush samples had disappeared. During the evening Inspectors Laflamme and Allen caught the alleged culprit with the satchel in his possession at the corner of Charles and Central street and walked him to the police station so neatly that less than three persons on the street know that he was under arrest. He gave his name as William E. Willis.

Stole the Hand Bag.

Miss S. J. Joy, living at 10 Tyler street left a hand bag in which there was a wallet containing $11 on the seat of a carriage in front of her door and soon after missed the pocketbook. The police were notified and as Inspector Allen was on his way to Boston on the 3.25 train he found two suspicious looking lads there who had bought tickets for Boston at the Bleachery station. They were questioned and he had them detained until he returned on a later train. They gave the names of James Logan, 12 years of age and Joseph Lennon, 16 years of age, on Logan $9 were found. They did not deny the theft.

When a number of witnesses had been examined Judge Hadley found Allen guilty and fined him $20. He appealed and was held in $400 for the Superior court.

One year ago we advertised a change in business but owing to the hard times we could not see our way clear to do so. Now as things are looking brighter we have concluded to make the change. Our store after Jan. 1st will be a specialty store, keeping only black and colored dress goods, silks, velvets, linens and dressmakers supplies. Until then our entire stock will be sold at a great discount. All of our wash goods, cottons, blankets, flannels, corsets, buttons, etc., will be entirely closed out at what they will bring. Now is the time you need the goods and you can buy them at prices we should sacrifice them for in January. Black goods were never sold so low as we shall sell them for in this sale, which will commence Monday morning, Oct. 29th.

FIRST UNION SHOP.

Chance for Organized Labor to Endorse the Action of a Tailoring Firm.

Sharrow & Baxandall, the merchant tailors of 93 Gorham street, have decided to use the union label on all their goods, and to that end give public notice of the fact that theirs is the only union shop in this city. This is an important announcement as it compells the firm to employ none but union labor, and in this course they ask for the hearty endorsement and co-operation of organized labor of the city.

Home Rule Assured.

Those who think that the home rule movement is dead should digest the following note from Justin McCarthy:

A correspondent having written to Mr. Justin McCarthy, M. P., drawing his attention to a passage in Mr. Courtney's recent speech at Hessen Ford, has received the following reply:

Oct. 8, 1894.

Dear Sir:—Mr. Courtney is quite mistaken. The desire for home rule is absolutely inextinguishable among the Irish people. The carrying of a home rule measure is as certain as anything in human affairs can be—as certain, let us say, as the rising of tomorrow's sun.

Very truly yours,
JUSTIN MCCARTHY.

About the Bijou License.

THE WEAVERS DANCED.

Merry Party in Associate Hall in Which the Young People Danced to Their Heart's Content.

The second grand social of the Ingrain weavers was held in Associate hall, last evening, and attracted a large number of young people, just as does every affair managed by the weavers.

The gathering taxed the dancing space and many sat in the gallery, contenting themselves with watching the merry dancers. In the upper hall ice cream, cake and coffee were served and three tents were pitched for fortune tellers who solved the mysteries of the young people's lives to their entire satisfaction.

From 8 to 9 o'clock Hibbard's orchestra gave a delightful concert after which dancing commenced. Owing to the large crowd, there was no march.

Miss Nellie O'Brien was general manager, Miss Maggie Keltey, assistant, Miss Annie Collins, floor director, and Kate Breen, assistants. The aids were: Louise Keene, Maggie Donoghue, Mary Meers, Mary Hennessy, Beezie Keegan, Mary E. McHugh, Sadie Williams, Annie Breen, Jennie Atkinson, Kates Collins, Nellie Shea.

COURT COLUMBUS.

Two Years Old and a Vigorous Youngster—Its Celebration Quite An Occasion Last Night.

Foresters' hall held one of the largest gatherings in its history last evening. It was the occasion of the second anniversary of Court Columbus, A. O. F., and the members of the court and their friends responded in large numbers to the invitations issued.

Twenty-four new members were initiated into the order, which nourishes unity, benevolence and concord.

Seated on the platform were representatives of the various courts in this city. Such a gathering of officers is seldom seen at a Foresters' assembly.

Chief Ranger Bourbonniere of the court in opening the meeting gave a brief history of the court since its organization and praised its efforts in advancing Forestry. He cordially welcomed the friends of the court who were present, and dwelt upon the benefits of membership in the order.

The court is the youngest in the city, but in point of membership it is quite a healthy youngster. Its financial condition is also encouraging.

On the invitations sent out for last evening's meeting was the following verse:

"Tonight we celebrate our birth,
We're proud of how we're grown;
We gladly welcome each of you,
We feel you are our own.
We asked you to be present here,
We're happy that you came;
To help us clothe those manly men
With our Forestic name."

PASS WORDS TO HEAVEN.

Evangelistic Utterances Which Shock Some of the People Who Attend Revival Services.

"While the congregation stands up to sing the next hymn, will the janitor open that little round window in the ceiling and let the Devil out?" is the statement credited to the preacher at a recent revival. The congregation bestirred itself to watch the little round ventilator anxious to see his Satanic Majesty go out.

Then at another meeting during which it is stated that the unpleasant subject of hell was minutely described, the preacher told the congregation that certain of his relatives were in that uncongenial place. As the story goes two young men at the rear of the church rose to go out. With great impressiveness the preacher is said to have cried out, "There go two young men to h—ll;" whereupon one of the young men turned round suddenly and replied, "Do you want to send a message to your grandmother?"

At another time during a talk to men, under the head of a sensational topic, the preacher said something like this: "When I go fishing for trout I use good bait, but when I start out to catch suckers and hornpout, I use sucker bait," meaning evidently that his sensational topic was mental bait to draw a congregation. Still another time while talking about men's failings he denounced the effeminate species of man in vigorous language. Just at that moment a man in the gallery got up to go out. "Perhaps that man parts his hair in the middle," cried the speaker. The revival meetings are frequently so productive of sensational sayings and cyclonic conversions that the crowds continue to gather.

LINK OF STEEL

Which Will Connect Lowell With the Seashore is Being Forged Rapidly.

THEATRICAL NEWS.

"Old Jed Prouty," right from Bucksport, Me., will pay us a visit next Wednesday evening and of course when he holds a reception at the Opera house he will be welcomed heartily.

A comedy drama The Engineer will be here next Saturday.

MUSIC HALL.—At Music hall, last night, the Ethel Tucker company gave a very acceptable performance of the drama entitled a Mountain Pink. The title role was well sustained by Miss Ethel Tucker, and the support was good. With the company for this week is Miss Lora A. Clift, a talented actress, who is well qualified to take a leading part with any of the best companies on the stage today. Tonight the company makes its farewell appearance.

At Music Hall.

"Enemies for Life," a realistic melodramatic sensation in four acts, is the bill offered next week. The play gives opportunity for the introduction of many mechanical and scenic effects. Miss Joan Cravan as Naomi, a part calling for strong emotional powers, is thoroughly convincing in her portrayal of the character. She has surrounded herself with a powerful company, and a performance of excellent merit can be looked for.

PERSONAL.

James McCabe has returned from a six months' stay in Detroit.

Mrs. Harriet Sanborn of New York has been the guest of Mrs. George F. Richardson the past week.

Mr. Richard H. Clark of Pearson's store on Shattuck street is the happy father of an eight pound girl, a new arrival at his home.

Mrs. Charles W. Saunders and Miss Saunders have returned from their mountain home at Livermore, N. H., where they have been spending the summer as usual.

Miss Baker of Andover street gave a very pleasant card party last evening. There were nine tables of progressive whist and prizes were won by Miss Josephine Pickering, Miss Ethel Batchelor, Messrs. W. E. Westall and F. A. Chase. After the game supper was served.

Down Come Bicycle Charges.

The latest cut in the price of bicycles is the second one of $25 in two years, and probably the end is not yet. It is quite likely that the not distant future will witness as big a reduction in the price of the wheel as has already been seen in the price of the sewing machine.—Herald.

The A. P. A. Are Brave.

LOWELL, MASS., Oct. 22,

EDITOR OF THE PILOT:—For a long time I believed that the pragmatic, ferocious and nocturnal defenders of the little red school-house and the flag, little known to British Americans thirty years ago, were really bluffing and simply trying to frighten the timid Catholics and the pacific Irish; but ever since this pot-valiant body of fire-eaters have so gallantly and fearlessly attacked Miss Louise Imogen Guiney, I have become convinced that they are really able without the aid of the regular army and navy, the militia or police, to lick—a postage stamp. VOTE 521 TO 477

Narrow Margin to Continue Fall River Strike.

MILL MEN SAY THE STRIKE IS ALMOST ENDED.

Latest News From Scene of the Mill Troubles.

By Associated Press to THE SUN.

FALL RIVER, Oct. 27.—By the close vote of 521 to 477, the striking weavers at a meeting today decided to continue the strike.

The action was later made unanimous by motion.

Previous to voting the manufacturers' letter was read and criticized unfavorably. The manufacturers anticipate an early settlement of the strike, and say the close vote indicates a probable settlement by the end of next week.

The mills will be open Monday for all who care to return.

Traction company, who mysteriously disappeared from that city on Sunday afternoon, Oct. 7, was located in this city yesterday afternoon, after the New York authorities had sent out a general alarm upon the request of his wife.

He showed the effects of a prolonged spree but was perfectly clear and coherent in his statement, which was that while under the effects of liquor he went back to his office, opened the safe and took out $1500, which he spent in Jersey City and Port Jerris.

He was taken back to Bridgeport at midnight.

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., Oct. 26—Policeman Marcellus was fatally shot, yesterday afternoon, while trying to arrest three tramps in a store in the East end. After firing 20 shots in the store, the tramps took to the woods.

Darkness favored the escape of the tramps, and most of the searching party returned at 7 o'clock with no hopes of discovering the men last night. A few were left there on picket duty.

For Governor:

HON. JOHN E. RUSSELL of Leicester.

For Congressman:

HON. GEO. W. FIFIELD of Lowell.

For Senator:

HON. PETER J. BRADY of Lowell.

THE COURTS decide that Pullman is not a common carrier and therefore relieve him of a great many suits in which heavy damages were expected. Pullman should have been held responsible for much of the damage done by the strike or lockout in his works.

HON. JOSIAH QUINCY and Senator Fitzgerald will speak here on Monday evening. They will get a rousing reception. Mr. Fitzgerald was a co-worker with Hon. Peter J. Brady and can tell how hard he worked for the cause of labor and for Lowell's interests in the normal school matter.

IF THE aldermanic precedent established at the last meeting in the refusal to license an intinerant clothing hawker, be followed it will benefit the merchants of Lowell. It is a protection against dishonesty, against selling shoddy goods under false pretences, against swindling the community. It is to be hoped that the precedent will be followed.

EVERYBODY INTERESTED in the senatorial fight should read the records of Brady and Foss. The latter voted for the telephone swindle which was vetoed by Governor Greenhalge the former voted against that measure. Foss was absent at 84 out of 111 roll calls, Brady 18 out of 170 and those because he was on a tour of inspection with the prison and labor committees.

THE CALAMITY speakers say that good times have not returned, that they will not return until the republicans be restored to power. According to Reed and McKinley the g. o. p. can create wealth and distribute it throughout the land. God is the only creative power in existence and Hon. John E. Russell demonstrates that wealth cannot be created by law. It is produced by labor.

POINTS OF MR. RUSSELL'S ADDRESS.

Hon. John E. Russell in his speech at Huntington hall, on Thursday evening, worked in some nuggets of political philosophy that are well worth remembering.

His refutation of the fallacy that any government by mere legislation can create wealth was a blow to the arguments of Reed and McKinley. The sources of wealth are the soil, the mines and the fisheries. The government does not work any of these and cannot, therefore, create wealth.

He also exposed the fallacy of Evarts as to this day advocated by republicans, that if the few be made rich by government bounties and high protective duties, they will share their wealth with the poor. In this country where Carnegie, Pullman the Vanderbilts, and Goulds practically do as they please, where they control legislation, where the wealth is accumulated in the hands of the few as in no other country of the world, there is everywhere the most convincing proofs of the falsity of this claim.

Republicans are today coming around to the doctrine that duties should be levied for no other purpose than revenue. John Sherman has preached that doctrine for years, he is now preaching it in Ohio, and Reed and other republicans are abandoning the McKinley platform to accept the same theory.

This is a result of the democratic proclamation of this principle which is sure to be embodied in the platform of the republican party at no distant date.

No presidential election in this country was carried on the issue of raising protective duties; but several elections have been carried on the issue of reducing duties. The advancement of duties is not so injurious to the country as the ordeal of reducing them afterwards, because by this means unnecessary bounties are taken away from various industries which should live without government support.

Another point made clear by Mr. Russell was, that in free trade countries nearly all the labor strikes are for an increase of wages while in the United States most strikes are against reductions. This is another proof of the greed of American monopolists. They control legislation, they control the markets and when protected in these iniquities they can afford to dispise labor organizations.

Panics do not come suddenly, they are caused by a disordered currency, by a reduction in the price of agricultural products or by wild speculation. The panic now passing away was precipitated by the Sherman silver law, but the repeal of that law did not effect a complete cure. The causes were deeper laid than that. It had its foundation in republican legislation, in excessive protection for certain industries, in the currency laws and various resultant causes.

Overproduction is a great cause of dull times. The home market has not a sufficient vent for the goods manufactured. If Fall River or any city suffering from an overstocked market could send its supplies to Europe, India, China and Africa, it could easily dispose of as much as would cause a greater activity in the cotton mills. An instance occurred in which the Fall River mills opened an office in Manchester, England, and there disposed of their surplus stock. If the same could be done now or if America could enter the markets of the world as does England, business would be better than it is or than it will be in the near future.

One thing emphasized by Mr. Russell will be readily admitted by every labor agitator in the state. Although the republicans have a majority in the house and senate, and although they often make great protestations of zeal for the interest of labor, yet they have never passed a single labor reform bill that was not extorted from them by long and persistent hammering of democrats. That shows very clearly how important it is to have democrats in the legislature even though in a minority. They yet succeed in securing the passage of needed reforms. This should be an incentive to vote for Hon. Peter J. Brady and Hon. George W. Fifield, both of whom can be implicitly relied upon to advocate the labor reforms to be pushed to the front in the near future.

TRUE LOYALTY.

Here is the Catholic idea of true Americanism as expressed by Archbishop Ireland:

"The individual who does not in his own name and from his own heart proclaim his right of liberty for his fellow-citizen is no true son of America, and he should quickly hie himself away from her shores.

"The country entrusts to you the defiance of true Americanism. Banish from the social and political life of the country all strife of race and creed. Allow but one test—Americanism—loyalty to the public weal on the battle field and at the polls.

"Religious prejudice is a boomerang which returns upon him who launches it. The cry of religious prejudice unfortunately has been raised, and in it there is often, I believe, more politics than religion. It should be put down. American loyalty and fitness for office—these must ever be, and these alone, the conditions which determine an American's vote. In this matter, as in all other questions of American citizenship, the veteran soldier will be first in the pathway of honor and duty."

FAR DISTANT WORLDS.

They Give a Faint Idea of the Immeasurable Immensity of Space.

Galileo, in his "Sidereal Messenger," made a map of 80 new stars which he had discovered in the constellations of Orion's Belt and the "Sword," and since then astronomer after astronomer, as is well known, has added various groups and galaxies to the 2,000 or 3,000 conspicuous stars of the first six magnitudes which can be always seen with the naked eye. It is curious and not complimentary to the good sense of mankind that those stars should have been looked upon as merely intended to spangle the sky and give light at night. As lamps they were always a failure. Sixty times the total starlight on the clearest night would not equal the illumination given by the moon; 35,000,000 times their radiance would be required to equal sunlight. Yet the stars which are seen even by a powerful telescope are now known to be only an insignificant proportion of those actually existing inside "visible space."

Telescopic photography as practiced today in all the observatories reveals in apparently every blank region of the celestial sphere countless new and distant worlds, lying far beyond all methods of mortal computation and measurement. The only footrule with which we can at all estimate the scale of distances in the "visible universe" is light. This travels along the ether at the rate of 186,000 miles in a second, so that the ray which we receive from the sun left his surface eight minutes before it has reached our eyes.

By ingenious processes, based on complex arithmetic, astronomers have determined the distance of about 80 stars, and the nearest of all of them to our system is Alpha Centauri. The radiance of this star takes, however, about four years to reach human vision, while that which we perceive from Alpha Tauri or Aldebaran was projected from its glittering source 27 years ago, and most of those seen deeper in the night sky are so far off that their present light left them 300 or 400 years back. Many are today visible whose beams have traveled to our gaze only after a lapse of thousands of years, and there must be radiant streams now on their way from heavenly bodies in the empyrean which will only reach the eyes of our very latest posterity.—Sir Edwin Arnold in North American Review.

CURES MOTHERS

M. W. SCOTT, Esq., of the U. S. Marshall's Office, Atlanta, Ga., writes: "For many years my wife has been a constant sufferer from indigestion, sick headache, nervous prostration and all other complaints that the female sex is heir to, and, after trying many remedies and doctors with but little or no relief, I persuaded her to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery.' She was so out of heart she returned the answer that it would be like all the rest—of no good; but on my account, she said she would try it, so I got one bottle each and before she had used half of a bottle she felt that it was benefiting her, and she has continued to improve ever since, and now thinks it the most wonderful remedy on earth for her sex, and recommends it to all suffering females. She has not been so well in ten years.

I write this without any solicitation and with a free, good will, so that you may let all who may suffer know what it has done for her." Sold by medicine dealers everywhere.

HOW TO STOP WHAT IS KNOWN AS NAIL BITING.

This Habit Can be Easily Stopped in Early Years—It is a Sign of Instability of Character—How to Sterilize Milk For Children.

The practice of nibbling at the finger nails is to be condemned, first, on the ground that the nails are thereby rendered brittle and unsightly, and, secondly, because it is senseless and the practice of it a source of constant irritation to the friends of any one who does it.

A child can be broken early in years. Thus it is usually sufficient to explain to the child the pernicioussness of the habit, requesting him to be constantly watchful against it in himself and to discourage the practice in every one else. Punishment is usually uncalled for.

Strategy may be resorted to in case the habit be well established. The finger ends may be dipped in some harmless preparation of a disagreeable or bitter nature, which will serve to remind the child what he is doing.

Among the school children of Paris the habit is widely prevalent. Of the total number of children examined, about one-third were given to the practice, the greater proportion being among the girls. The age at which the habit was most common was found to be between 12 and 15 years.

The investigator thinks he has discovered a remarkable relation between nail biting and a defective or at least an impaired stability of mind and character, as all the teachers united in saying the pupils addicted to nail biting were the poorest students. The boys were inclined to effeminacy and the girls to slackness. Both sexes showed a lessened ability to sustain the attention and were consequently the hardest pupils to teach.

How to Sterilize Milk.

Take a tin pail and have made for it a false bottom perforated with holes and having legs half an inch high to allow circulation of the water. The bottle of milk to be treated is set on this false bottom, and the pail is filled with water until it reaches the level of the surface of the milk in the bottle. A hole may be punched in the cover of the bottle, in which a cork is inserted, and the thermometer is put through the cork, so that the bulb dips into the milk, and the temperature can thus be watched without removing the cover. This water is then heated until the milk reaches a temperature of 155 degrees F., when it is removed from the heat and allowed to cool gradually. A temperature of 150 degrees maintained for half an hour is sufficient to destroy any germs likely to be present in the milk, and it is found in practice that raising the temperature to 150 degrees and then allowing it to stand in the heated water until cool insure the proper temperature for the required time.

How to Wave the Hair as at Present Worn.

The hair must no longer be crimped, but must be laid over the head in large natural looking waves. The secret lies in the fact that the iron is no longer applied to the tip of the tress, and the hair wound over it, but the tress, of the hair itself is wound around the iron, beginning as near the scalp as it is comfortable to hold the heated iron. The parting of the hair, which proved so unpopular when it was first introduced, has been accepted chiefly by those persons of a Madonna type of face, for they can bear this severe style of hairdressing. The delicate fringe of curls which so many maidens still continue to wear is too becoming to the majority of American girls to be driven out of fashion.

How to Acquire Lightness of Step.

Let a girl walk about a room on tiptoes, at times balancing a book or sofa pillow on her head, for dignity. If this is done for a half hour each day for a year, she will walk like a queen forever after. A heavy step and downcast eyes prevent grace, lightness or dignity.

How to Remove Different Stains.

Salts of lemon succeed where most things fail. Peach stains are very hard to remove, and even with the above remedy a hole is often left instead of the stain. Extreme care will prevent this. Take a sunny day for the task; first moisten the spot and then rub on a very little of the salts of lemon. Lay the linen in the sun for two or three minutes and then wash thoroughly with soap and warm water. If this does not entirely remove all discoloration, repeat the whole process. Iron rust is more easily removed. After washing the article squeeze lemon juice on the spot and then cover thickly with salt. Lay in the sun all day, wash, and if the rust is not entirely removed repeat the application. This is equally good for ink stains.

How to Make the Ribbon Harness Now In Use.

This "harness" is a revived fashion. It consists of bretelles or braces, starting from the belt in front under a horizontal bow and passing over the shoulders, where they are tied in fanciful knots, then down the back to meet two rosettes at the belt. The novelty is to continue the shoulder ribbons both front and back to the bottom of the skirt, each end being finished with a large square bow, the long ends flying out with every motion.

How to Serve an "Everyday" Meal.

Family meals should be so well served each day that no effort will be apparent when company is present. The servant should be taught to pour water, pass plates and observe the guests' wants without aid from her mistress. There should be no noise or clashing of plates or glasses, and the courses should be remove without a word. When the dessert is placed on table, the glasses should be filled and plates passed, and the servant should then retire.

The Bloomer Girl.

Oh, I'll not sigh for the social girl!
Over me she'll hold no sway.
But I'll give all to the bloomer girl.
Her wheel shall have rights of way.
Oh, bloomer girl, sweet bloomer girl, smooth may thy pathway be!
Your costume is more handsome than the finest robes we see.

Oh, I won't bet on the sporty girl,
Won't even play her for place,
But to win I'll pick the cycling girl!
On my heart she sets the pace.
The bloomer girl, sweet bloomer girl, foremost she'll always be.
Oh, she goes and leads in a whirl! She is the girl for me.

Oh, I've no thoughts for the tennis girl,
With her skilled and artful poise,
But I think lots of the bloomer girl
On the wheel that makes no noise.
The bloomer girl, sweet bloomer girl, as cute as cute can be,
And looking far more attractive than any girl we see.

Oh, I don't care for the seashore girl!
She's a skinny, freckled fright.
But the dancing, bounding bloomer girl
I love with all my might!
Oh, bloomer girl, sweet bloomer girl, moved by what I can see,
If ever I get married, to a bloomer girl 'twill be!

FOUND IT WAS ONLY A DREAM.

The Tramp's Vision of Existence Under the Brotherhood of Man.

Hungry and Tired He Wandered Into a Chicago Populist Meeting—Its Speakers and Atmosphere Carried Him Away—Facing Reality Without Breakfast.

A man stood on the corner of the street watching a procession of American citizens marching with torches and banners to the patriotic music of a brass band. He was not well dressed, not even clean, and his eyes had a hungry gleam in them. Perhaps I should not have said "man," since he was evidently that peculiar nineteenth century production so inspiring to cheap wits and plutocratic newspapers—the tramp. He was still hunting work and had sadly deteriorated in the process. He mechanically followed the long procession and entered with them. The building, he afterward learned, was Central Music hall. It was filled to the dome with restless, enthusiastic humanity, such a crowd as he had never before seen.

The chairman arose and began a few words of introduction. As he spoke a tall, slender, quiet man advanced to the front of the stage. No further words of the chairman could be heard. The audience, with one impulse, rose to their feet and the occasion. They shouted, clapped, stamped, waved hats and handkerchiefs until the great organ fairly rumbled in response. Moments went on. The cheering continued, rose in louder waves, receded, swelled again and yet again. Meanwhile the quiet man stood before them, serene and smiling, waiting for a chance to be heard. At last the noise subsided, and he began. "Three cheers for Debs!" called out an unsatisfied admirer, and again the dome quivered with volumes of sound sent up to it.

It mattered not what Debs said. It was the man Debs—the man maligned, persecuted and prosecuted for possessing human sympathies—they wanted. To see him was enough. His every word was cheered, and they were few, for two overflow meetings waited to hear him. The tramp, away back in a corner, began to feel the warm magnetism of sympathetic contact with enthusiastic human beings pleading his cause. He forgot he was hungry and homeless. Another man was introduced who received a scarcely less rapturous ovation than the first. To his clear, simple words he listened with closest attention. The easy, narrativeliko style of the speaker held him closely to the last. Who that has ever listened to Ignatius Donnelly wonders at it? Soaring with his imaginative flight to the planet Mars, and wondering with the wise scientists there whose telescopes allow them to see all that passes on earth, but not to hear, why so many mills and factories are silent, so many men idly wandering about, why so many granaries and storehouses are full, and so many people have nothing, our tramp learned for the first time that good and learned men thought these things wrong as well as himself.

It was a great experience for the tramp. His brain was not stupid, only torpid. He was not hopelessly ignorant, only untaught. To be told that his wants and wishes were natural and right and that justice demanded he should have an opportunity to satisfy them was to have the old, inbred code of morals upset within him. He scarcely noticed when the crowds began to pour out of the great hall, not even when the lights were lowered, and only when the corridors began to echo strangely to a few straggling footsteps did he rouse from his reverie. The usher who passed through the gallery did not see him crouched in a corner next to the wall, and presently doors below and around him began to clang, the last footfall died away, and the darkness of midnight shut him in.

Then he vaguely thought he would get up and try to find his way to the street. He groped along, stumbled against a small open door, found himself in a narrow passage, dimly lighted he reasoned not how, and followed it, not knowing what else to do. It was inexplicably long, he happened to think presently, and as he did so he noticed a door standing ajar, which opened into a pleasant garden. He stepped out and was surprised to find himself on a large lawn, where fountains were playing, flowers blooming and soft music floating out from some invisible source. Beautiful women and handsome men in artistic dress were grouped about conversing, walking, playing games or reading.

"I've run into some nabob's ranch, and if they see me they'll set the cops after me," thought the tramp. So he watched the pleasant scene from behind some shrubbery until, sadly satiated with seeing and not sharing, he turned away into a secluded path. Soon he met two well dressed young men, who smilingly accosted him:

"Hello, comrade! Just come in from a walking trip? You haven't had time to rest up and dress yet, I suppose?"

"Why, you don't know me?" he stammered.

"Ha, ha!" laughed one. "I suppose you belong on the earth and can't be so much of a stranger. Queer taste you have to choose to wear such clothes, and you must have struck some strange wilderness not to have been able to change them before they got so worn and soiled."

"I've been in some strange places, but in the best I couldn't find a chance to change these clothes for better ones."

A look of repulsion crept over the faces of the young men.

"It isn't possible you are one of those unnatural beings whom I have heard of, but never seen, who will not work at all?"

"Heaven knows I am anxious to work at anything if I can only earn a decent living at it."

"Then why the dickens don't you? Queer specimen, I must say."

"Did you ever try hunting a job?" the tramp asked, with a slight sneer in his tones. They broke into a hearty laugh.

"The idea of hunting a job! Well, that's rich. Two strong fellows like us—as good roadbuilders as there are in the country. Well, I guess not."

The tramp could only gaze at them in surprise. As he gazed they passed on, laughingly remarking that he must be in a hurry to get home to a bath and a clean suit of clothes.

"What! Do they mean that they actually work, and that they never hunted a job? Do they dig the ground, haul dirt, break stones, grade streets like common laborers, those young swells? It's a joke they're playing on me. I don't believe it," the tramp soliloquized as he stared after them.

But he wandered on and presently came out on a broad, white road, leading past some large, fine looking buildings that suggested machinery, though they were much better than anything he had ever seen in the way of shops. He saw a wide entrance gate standing open and concluded he would pass through. He saw great rows of splendid machinery, huge piles of unwrought iron, some partly finished castings, but no workers, and the wheels and belts were silent. He went on, up a wide flight of stairs, noting with a connoisseur's eye the perfect arrangements for work, the cleanliness the order and good ventilation. Still he saw no one. He wandered on and finally came upon two men who were trying to move a loaded cart on a small steel track. Instinctively he placed his shoulder against the car until, with their united efforts, it started.

"Thank you kindly," said one, who looked like a gentleman amusing himself in a workingman's overalls. "I wish we might persuade you to stay with us a few days," he said wistfully.

"Why, I'm willing enough. Just give me a place to sleep and enough grub to fill up on."

The gentleman looked at him with astonishment. "Where in the world did you come from? Here, you go over there to the door marked 'office.' You'll find a man there that will talk to you and be very glad to see you."

Our tramp needed no second bidding to move toward the door designated. He slowly turned the knob and carefully walked in. A fine old gentleman in his shirt sleeves, with his silk hat on the back of his head and his gray hair much tousled about, bent over some small pieces of machinery, with a worried expression on his face.

"Please, sir"—began the intruder.

"Eh? Who is it? What can I do for you?" exclaimed the old gentleman, dropping his work and quickly turning around.

"It's nobody in particular," the tramp deprecatingly said, half expecting to be sworn at for troubling the gentleman when his business should be made known. "I called to see—I didn't know but you needed some workmen."

"What! Do you mean that you want work?" exclaimed the old gentleman, coming forward to shake his visitor's hand. "Why, I'll give you anything you ask," and then he stopped as if an idea had struck him or some carefulness in dealing had occurred to his mind.

"Why, now I come to look at you, there's something familiar in your appearance, something that brings back old times. Fifty years ago, when I was a young lad in my father's works, I used to see such chaps as you hanging around, fairly begging the old man 'to give 'em a job,' as they called it. Haven't seen my like you for more than 25 years. You can't hire a man anywhere unless you give him as much as his productions come to. Just think, I've got orders in that must be filled, and not a man can be had for love or money. I've got my son and a fellow I helped once out there doing a little. If I could get two more skillful men, I'd roll up my sleeves, and we could manage to get out the orders. But I can't get them. All the co-operative factories are running full blast, for the high flown working men must all have fine houses, fine furniture, music, books, art, modern improvements—everything that used to belong exclusively to the rich—and the demand is right up to the supply. Can't get a man to work more than four hours a day either. Say they don't have to, and on what they earn they live like princes. Great state of affairs. I must admit it's safer and more reliable, and we needn't fear panics, but I can't get over the old fashioned liking for the time when employers controlled their workers, ran everything their own way, and the common herd had to be humble and suppliant. I'm bound to live out my time on the old lines. Now, you look like those old time fellows that were always out of work. How you come here I don't know, but it makes me feel good, and I'll hire you. What wages do you want?"

The tramp, bewildered and rejoiced at this harangue, was studying whether he might not, under the employer's emergency, ask $4 a day. When the rich man, fearing he was about to refuse, said: "Come, I'll give you nearly 90 per cent of what you produce. Say you'll produce about $30 worth in four hours, I'll give you $25 for the time."

The tramp started so violently that he came in sudden contact with something hard and cold. He looked up. It was so dark he could see nothing but a tiny gleam of light far away, like something shining through a crack in a distant shutter. He was lying on a floor, and his hand struck against something he thought was a seat. He was alone in the great theater, and he had only dreamed, after all.

With the coming of day he was released and sent out to hunt a breakfast at the price of three hours' hard work, where he might ponder in vain over that $25 for four hours' work; that dreamland where workers lived like princes and looked like students or artists, and to wonder if he would live to see such a state of affairs. If it looked so impossible, he asked himself why it shouldn't be true and could think of no answer. LIZZIE M. HOLMES.

CASES OF STERN REPRESSION.

ONE HALF OF THE WORKINGMEN TO BUTCHER THE OTHER HALF.

Laws For the Suppression of the Disinherited Should They Protest—Who Will Make and Enforce These Laws?—A Letter Which Fits the Present.

The following letter, which was written a few years ago, is especially appropriate to the conditions of today because of the fact that under instructions recently given by President Cleveland the military forces of the nation are being concentrated at or near industrial centers. The plutocratic newspapers of today, like the Bloomfield Citizen in the quoted paragraph, denounce as "socialists," "communists" and "anarchists" every workingman who engages in a strike against injustice. In the light of the experience of the past few years American workingmen should be able to absorb at once the lesson contained in the following letter:

Not many years ago a suburban newspaper, the Bloomfield (N. J.) Citizen, printed an editorial on "Labor Troubles." In some respects it was fairer to the workingmen than the average editorial in the local papers, but after enumerating some of the difficulties surrounding the settlement of the "labor question" it says:

The presence of socialists in every large city, with newspaper teaching that "property is robbery," is another source of danger. How shall it be met? We answer in several ways—by teaching workingmen the necessity of obedience to law, by legislative enactment and by stern, repressive measures.

"Stern, repressive measures." How much does that mean? Workingmen, are you to be repressed? Who are to pass these "stern, repressive measures?" Representatives elected by workingmen—as all our representatives must be? And, when these "stern, repressive measures" have passed into law, by whom are they to be executed? By the workingmen themselves? If not, by whom? By a body of soldiers supported by the workingmen?

The man who wrote that editorial, whether he calls himself a Democrat or a Republican, has not yet learned the first principles of a people's government. He ought to study the Declaration of Independence for one day at least.

This Citizen editor says that "property and life must be protected at all hazards." True to the instincts of his class, he puts "property" first.

Would it not be a captivating sight to see The Citizen editor and all the editors who fawn on the money power, and all the ministers who preach patience to the poor and the sacredness of property to the rich, and all the lawyers and judges who echo and re-echo "vested rights," and all the landlords and railroad kings and usurers, and all the soldiers of the standing army living idly at labor's expense, and all the legislators who misrepresent the people—I say would it not be a captivating sight to see all these start out to "protect property at all hazards" and to execute their "stern, repressive measures?" But I wonder if they would realize what a puny little handful they would be compared to all the workingmen in the country who are to "be taught the necessity of obedience to law." My friends—and now I am talking to the workingmen—do you know on whom these men depend to "protect their property at all hazards?" On you every time, directly or indirectly.

Have you heard of the northern senator who was told by a southerner that "the north had more to fear from the discontent of its laboring classes than ever the south had to fear from its slaves?" And did you hear how this senator replied: "Don't trouble yourself about us. If worse comes to worst, we can hire one-half of the workingmen to butcher the other half?" True, and so whenever I hear editors or workingmen talk of violence I am sad and troubled. We want such intelligence and unity, such a feeling of brotherhood among the world's workers that no man will dare to advocate "stern, repressive measures," thinking in his heart or saying with his lips that they can be enforced by "hiring one-half of the workingmen to butcher the other half."

I once heard of an incident bearing on this matter which always, when I think of it, fills me with a great glow of hope for the workers of our country. In 1877 a militia company, probably composed of workingmen, was called out to suppress a riotous strike. In this company was a young man—God bless him—who said: "I'll go, captain, but I shall hand my musket over to the strikers if I do anything. Do you think I can go in the interest of a corporation and shoot down men who are asking for a living for themselves and families?" The threat of "court martial" made no difference to this hero, who was brave enough not to fight. Suppose every man in every company that was called out to suppress those strikers had acted like this one.

What is needed to drive tyranny out of the world and forever emancipate the many from bondage to the few is to so educate the many that every tyrant will know that he cannot "hire one-half of the workingmen to butcher the other half."

Let every tyrant know that no man can be hired to be a human butcher, either as sheriff or soldier, and our freedom is won, for it is on hirelings that tyranny has always depended to carry out its "stern, repressive measures."

VON CAPRIVI GOES

Resigns as Premier on Account of Socialism.

EMPEROR WILLIAM ACCEPTS IT AND ANOTHER ONE.

Count Botho Zu Elenberg Steps Down and Out.

BERLIN, Oct. 27.—Chancellor von Caprivi and Count Botho Zu Eulenberg, president of the Prussian council of ministers, have resigned. It is known that for some time past there has been considerable tension between the chancellor and Count Zu Eulenberg, owing to the former's views in regard to the measures to be submitted to the Reichstag for the repression of socialism. The chancellor is in favor of pursuing a moderate policy, while Count Zu Eulenberg believed in the adoption of radical measures to obtain the end sought.

COUNT VON CAPRIVI.

So many versions are current of the suddenly precipitated crisis that it would be impossible to form a definite conclusion until the matter has further developed. Yesterday's outward events were as follows: After the services in the Russian chapel, which were attended by both Emperor William and Count von Caprivi, the emperor gave an audience to the chancellor at the castle at 2 o'clock. A quarter of an hour later, Count Zu Eulenberg had an audience with the emperor, and at 2:30 the emperor received Count Lechenfield, the Bavarian minister here; Count Hoenthal of Saxony, Baron von Buler of Wurtemberg and Dr. Jagen of Baden, all ministers of their respective countries.

Before his majesty received these ministers, both Count von Caprivi and Count Zu Eulenberg had resigned. Reports differ as to when, some saying that Count Zu Eulenberg resigned Tuesday, and that the emperor ineffectually tried to induce him to withdraw his resignation. It should be noted that Count Philip Zu Eulenberg, Count Botho's brother, is an intimate friend of the emperor.

Great Excitement Prevails.

The first intimation to the public of the crisis was the official announcement that the emperor had postponed his journey to Blankenberg. Any politician who had told in the morning that such a crisis was impending would have been laughed at. The greatest excitement was created when the events became known.

Numerous candidates are mentioned as successor to Count von Caprivi. Besides those already mentioned Baron von Zeedlitz is talked off. It cannot, however, be stated that any of those whose names have been mentioned have any prominent claims. It is asserted that the emperor has a "dark horse."

Count von Caprivi is said by his intimate friends to be glad to escape from the cares of the chancellorship. He is a moderate man, opposed to extreme views of any kind. Therefore, he is well hated in many quarters. The intrigues against him on the part of the Bismarckians and agricultural party have been bitter. He often expressed a desire to retire to military life, and only remained in office from a sense of duty to his country. He will, in a few days, proceed to Geneva for his health.

His persistent enemies have cause for self-congratulation, but the situation is regarded with great apprehension. It is believed that the emperor secretly favors strong repressive measures against the socialists and Poles, despite his expression of approval of Count von Caprivi's policy, and that the next chancellor will be called upon to introduce such measures. If so, stormy times are in store in the reichstag.

The emperor is credited with being much annoyed by the papers expressing such liberal approval of Count von Caprivi's policy. Any way, the latter's disappearance means a radical change in Germany's internal policy.

Caprivi's Career.

General Count Georg Leo von Caprivi do Caprera de Monte-Cucculi succeeded Prince Bismarck as chancellor of the German empire shortly after the latter's retirement in March, 1890. He was born at Charlottenberg in 1831, being the son of a high legal functionary in the service of Prussia. He entered the army in his 18th year, and won rapid promotion. He served with distinction in the campaigns of 1864 and 1866, and in the Franco-Prussian war he acted as chief of staff to the Tenth corps.

Swiftly ascending the other steps of the military ladder, he was appointed in 1883 to the command of the Thirtieth division at Metz. The next year he passed at a single bound from the army to the navy, succeeding Herr von Stitch on the latter's retirement from the head of the admiralty. In a short time naval men by profession were amazed at the mastery of their arts and the perception of their interests which were displayed by a mere landsman and soldier-like general, Von Caprivi. His administration proved at least that he was a man with a rare power of adapting himself to new modern lines of activity.

Soon after the present emperor's accession, the navy was reorganized and General von Caprivi was appointed to the command of the Tenth Army corps, the command of the imperial fleet being vested in Admiral von der Goltz. During maneuvers in the autumn of 1889, the emperor had a good opportunity to study the character of Von Caprivi, and later he was asked to accept the chancellorship. He was not anxious to accept the position, but his scruples and self-distrust were finally overcome, and he assumed the office which he has now resigned.

During his term of office he has had several severe contests with the reichstag, in all of which he has come out victorious. Among his later parliamentary struggles were the fights to secure an increase of the army and the adoption of commercial treaties. He was forced to make concessions on both measures, but the bills were finally passed to the satisfaction of the government, it being generally believed that Count von Caprivi had asked for more than he would be granted to him in order to make the concessions that were sure to be demanded.

His fight for a commercial treaty with Russia brought upon himself a fierce onslaught, and resulted in the formation of what is known as the agrarian party. The adoption of the treaty was opposed by every known political method, but in the end Count von Caprivi had the satisfaction of seeing the convention adopt it.

His fight to prevent the views of extremists in regard to the proper measures to be adopted against socialists and socialism prevailing is of too recent date to need extended mention. He insisted upon the adoption of a moderate policy, and it is said that the emperor agreed with him.

Count Zu Eulenberg is reported to have strenuously opposed anything but radical measures, and several times it has been reported that the difference of opinion between himself and the chancellor would lead to the resignation of one or both. It is surmised that this is the question which has at last led to the resignation of both.

Speculation is already rife as to Count von Caprivi's possible successor. Dr. Miquel, General Brenaart von Schellendorf, minister of war, and General Count von Waldersee are spoken of, but hope or fear is chiefly father of the thought. Until something more definite is known of the causes of the crisis, there can be no solution.

The Tageblatt declares that the astonishment caused by the resignations is equally great among the friends and the foes of the ex-chancellor and the ex-Prussian premier.

The newspapers here are only able to give conflicting conjectures as to the real cause of the crisis.

Some Are Alive.

IRON MOUNTAIN, Mich., Oct. 27.—The only fact established is that a number of the men imprisoned at the Pewabic mine are alive. Whom and how many will not be known until late today. Communication was established by means of hammering rocks. The men are well supplied with air. They have now been imprisoned over 40 hours. Superintendent Brown is certain that at least eight of the men have escaped uninjured, but fears there may have been many caught under the falling walls and crushed to death. Around the shaft are gathered large crowds of relatives.

How Olney Views It.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—Attorney General Olney, speaking of the statement of the assistant district attorney at Kansas City that there was no law by which election frauds could be punished in United States courts, said that on a careful examination of the statutes he was of the opinion that the Kansas City attorney was correct. CITY OF LOWELL.

Special · Notice -ON- Street Watering Assessments.

OFFICE OF THE CITY TREASURER AND COLLECTOR OF TAXES.

LOWELL, MASS., OCT. 26, 1894.

In view of the fact that there appears to be a general misunderstanding concerning the item for watering streets which appears on the tax bills of 1894, the following explanation is respectfully offered:

The law governing the watering of streets, provides that all assessments remaining unpaid for the year in which such assessments are laid, shall be included in the next annual tax bills against the several estates, and shall be considered a part of the annual taxes.

By this peculiar provision of the law, unpaid street watering assessments of 1893 appear on the tax bills of the year 1894, and are being paid as a part of the same.

The bills for watering streets for the year 1894 are being distributed, and many taxpayers naturally protest under the belief that they have already paid their street watering assessments with their annual taxes, when in reality they paid the street watering assessment for 1893 and their real estate tax for 1894 on one bill.

Bills for watering streets for 1894 are now due and payable. By resolution of the City Council, interest at the rate of seven per cent. per annum will be charged on all such bills remaining unpaid Nov. 1, 1894, until the same are paid.

The amount of all street watering bills for 1894, which remain unpaid Aug. 1, 1895, together with interest on the same, will be certified to the assessors, who will add the same to the tax bills of 1895.

JOHN H. HARRINGTON,
City Treasurer and Collector of Taxes.

ON RISING TIDE.

Of Popularity Safely Sails a Well Known Local Furnishing House.

The old tongue worn sayings that "time and tide wait for no man," and "there is a tide in the affairs of men which, taken at the flood leads to success," are somehas just appropriate to the growth of the furnishing house of Gookin Bros. From small beginnings they have built up a great business, until now they are the largest strictly furnishing house in the city.

The key to success which has unlocked the world of finance to them was small profits and as the firm grew it launched out in broader fields and cut down the margins of profit because by larger purchases they made better and closer bargains. If you need anything in furniture be sure and call at the store on Prescott street and place your order with them.

The Needlework Classes.

People's club, women's branch, the following classes will begin during the first week of November: Class in plain sewing; class in button-holes; embroidery class; class on dress-making with the use of a chart; millinery class. Those who wish to join any class must buy tickets in advance from the librarian who can be found every evening at the rooms of the club in Wyman's exchange at the corner of Merrimack and Central streets. The small fee required for tuition places these classes within reach of all.

The class in plain sewing is the most important of all, as it makes an excellent preparation for the other classes.

Pupils in this class have always found the course much more interesting than the name would imply. Instruction is given in the proper methods of doing the following work: basting, back stitching, overcasting, over-seaming, hemming, running, putting patches on cotton, woolen and figured goods, half-bias felled seam, dress darning (straight tear and three-cornered tear), putting on band, making and putting in gusset and stocking darning.

CLEVELAND IS SILENT.

Not Likely to Make a Statement In Endorsement of Hill.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—No authoritative information can be obtained here respecting the direct question as to the president's purpose to write or not to write a letter announcing his desire that all Democrats should earnestly support Democracy in New York. Nevertheless, it is the opinion of many of his friends that he will not in any way interfere in the New York campaign.

With reference to the president's registering or voting, one of his closest friends makes the statement that Mr. Cleveland had no legal residence in New York and could not lawfully register or vote there. Mr. Cleveland himself, it is understood, has said that his legal residence was in Washington. It can be stated further that, after the expiration of Mr. Cleveland's presidential term, he will not again take up his residence in New York.

APPETITE IS GOOD.

The General Condition of the Emperor of Russia Is Unchanged.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—An official bulletin issued from Livadia last night says: "During the course of the day the emperor ate. His appetite was good. He felt some weakness, but otherwise his condition was unchanged."

It is understood that Professor Grube has refused to operate upon the czar, as he declines to assume the responsibility of so doing.

The crown jewels are being forwarded to Livadia from Moscow in order to be used at the marriage of the czarewitch to Princess Alix of Hesse-Darmstadt, which ceremony has been fixed to take place on Monday next, although this date is subject to alteration in the event of unforeseen contingencies.

A General Vacation.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—The closing of the interior department will last until Monday, and employes will have a holiday until then. Those who have been particularly exposed to infection by contact with the people of the afflicted law division have been granted leave of 12 days. Offices located in other buildings will probably remain open.

Boston's Epidemic.

BOSTON, Oct. 27.—Diphtheria and scarlet fever are epidemic in certain sections of this city. At midnight last night there were in the city hospital 32 cases of diphtheria. In another ward were 29 patients suffering from both scarlet fever and diphtheria. In the epidemic hospital are 15 patients suffering from scarlet fever.

BUSINESS BOOM

A Bright Outlook For Products in General.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT SHOWN IN THE INDUSTRIALS.

Bradstreets' Review of Trade Shows Failures Steadily Decreasing.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Engrossing political excitement in many of the states causes a natural slackening in some kinds of business, but on the whole business indications are rather more favorable than they were a week ago.

Gold exports have ceased, quite a number of mills have gone into operation, and the demand for products, if not equal to that of prosperous years, is better than it has been most of the time this year.

The prices of farm products do not improve much, and there are still some strikes to resist the reduction of wages, so that the purchasing power of the people cannot have materially increased, but there is a more hopeful spirit which prompts greater activity. On the other hand, the record of past transactions is somewhat less favorable than of late.

Cotton and Cotton Manufactures.

Cotton has sold at 5.81 cents for middling uplands, and the large receipts at such low prices indicate clearly that the crop will at least be close to the largest, if not the largest, ever produced.

The anticipated settlement of difficulties at Fall River has not been realized, and at present a good many spindles and looms are idle. But strikes are temporary; a more lasting influence is the large accumulation of cotton in the world's markets, the stock of American in sight now exceeding 2,000,000 bales. It is interesting that in spite of the low price of the principal southern crop, wholesale dealers report rather more improvement in trade with the south than with any other section.

Grain and Provisions.

The wheat market is ¼ cent lower, and nothing appears to justify any important change. Western receipts have been 4,816,571 bushels, against 6,276,623 last year, and Atlantic exports only 684,253 bushels, against 1,060,066 last year.

Corn is higher, without any clear reason.

Pork is lower. Lard is 35 cents a hundred weight and hogs 40 cents lower. The contrast indicates how little the provision market depends at present on natural relations of supply and demand.

Industrials More Encouraging.

The boot and shoe industry leads in improvement, the actual shipments from the east being larger than in any previous year—for four weeks 350,016 cases, against 227,524 last year and 314,022 in 1892.

In textile industries the situation is peculiar and in many respects perplexing. It is undeniable that orders for goods are on the whole diminishing, and retail trade does not yet prompt such supplemental orders as were expected, but a good many works have found orders enough to start up for a time, some having business for several months.

The demand for wool is not as large as it has been, and while prices have scarcely changed for two weeks, sales are but 4,304,250 pounds, against 5,778,750 in 1892, and for four weeks 19,451,749 pounds, against 25,744,750 in 1892.

Prices were put down before the new tariff took effect, so that the results of foreign competition are felt mainly in reduced sales of some domestic wools. Almost nothing is doing in spring woolens for men's wear, but manufacturers are more encouraged to believe that, as to a large share of the cheaper goods, they can meet any price that foreign mills can make.

Business Failures Decreasing.

It is still, as it has been for some months, an encouraging fact that the volume of commercial failures is small. Reports for the three weeks of October cover liabilities of only $5,639,741, of which $2,629,671 were of manufacturing and $2,957,567 of trading concerns. The failures for the week were 231 in the United States, against 352 last year, and 52 in Canada, against 44 last year.

Bradstreet's Review of Trade.

Bradstreet's has this to say: No gain in business is reported from Montreal, but at Quebec City there is improvement noted among shoe manufacturers and dealers in leather.

Trade has been fair at Toronto, but mild weather is acting as a check on the sale of winter goods. At Halifax general business about equals an average at this season.

Bank clearings at Hamilton, Toronto, Montreal and Halifax aggregate $20,350,000 this week, against $19,850,000 last week, and $18,394,000 in the week a year ago.

There were 36 business failures reported in Canada this week. Last week the total was 39; one year ago it was 38, and the year before that 30.

Caught In a Storm.

COLBERG, Oct. 27.—Three torpedo boats were caught in a storm in the Baltic sea and headed for Colberger-Munde. Two of the boats were damaged in entering the harbor. The third boat ran ashore and one of the seamen aboard of her was drowned.

Died In a Chair.

AUGUSTA, Me., Oct. 27.—Dr. John M. Eveleth of Hallowell, aged 70, came to Augusta to attend a meeting of Trinity commandery. He took a seat in an anteroom, called for a drink of water, fell back in his chair and died in five minutes.

Howgate's Case.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—District Attorney Birney says that Captain Howgate will withdraw his plea of not guilty to the indictment charging him with embezzlement and will ask leave to demur to the indictment.

Given Up by Owners.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., Oct. 27.—The Falcon is still unheard of. Bowring Bros., the owners, have given her up, and it is not expected that any of the missing steamer's crew have been saved.

A Poor Man's Windfall.

SPRINGFIELD, O., Oct. 27.—James J. Wood, who was a poor carpenter, returned from Ireland yesterday with $200,000, his share of the estate of his ancestors.

Fought to a Draw.

An Offer of $50,000.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—A letter has been forwarded by Vice President Latnan of the Kinetoscope Exhibiting company to James J. Corbett and Bob Fitzsimmons, offering a purse of $50,000 for their fight, the contest to take place in Mexico, where there will be no danger of official interference.

VIOLATION OF LAW.

Northwestern Federal Office Holders Are Requested to Chip In.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—The civil service commission has received from a postmaster in Washington state a copy of a circular from the Democratic committee levying an assessment of $5 on each postmaster. It has the heading of the committee and is signed by Charles De France, secretary. It states that:

"The committee having under consideration the necessity and ways and means of raising funds for the campaign, have concluded that those who are enjoying the benefits of Democratic success in the past should contribute to the expenses of the present campaign. The committee have, therefore, assessed you $5."

It is stated by the commission that this circular, being sent to a person in a government building, is a violation of the law which prohibits solicitations in such buildings. A copy of a circular issued in a similar California case has been sent to the postmaster forwarding the circular from Washington state.

Many Public Bequests.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 27.—The will of Francis Buttrick, of Waltham, was filed at the probate court yesterday. Among the public bequests are the following: To the city of Waltham, $60,000 for a public library; $10,000 to the First Universalist society; $10,000 to the city of Waltham for a poor fund, and $25,000 to his wife, to be expended for charitable purposes. To his wife is left, for her own use, the old homestead and $150,000. The remainder of the estate, after the provisions of the will are carried out, is to be devoted to such charitable purposes as the executors may deem advisable.

Temperance Women Elect Officers.

SKOWHEGAN, Me., Oct. 27.—The Maine Non-Partisan Woman Christian Temperance union yesterday closed a successful convention. The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. A. C. Paul, Fort Fairfield; vice president, Mrs. A. P. A. Cushman, Auburn; general secretary, Mrs. A. L. McKeen, Belfast; recording secretary, Mrs. G. P. Porter, Oldtown; treasurer, Mrs. G. H. Denio, Bangor; assistant recording secretary, Mrs. F. H. Beal, Augusta.

Dr. Hudon Is Alive.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Oct. 27.—The Dr. Hudon whose name was mentioned in a bottle washed ashore at Old Orchard, Me., as having been lost at sea while fishing, is in this city. He left Biddeford, Me., Oct. 7. The bottle story is dated Oct. 8. Hudon claims he does not know anything regarding the bottle affair, and thinks it must have been a hoax.

Letters Only Can Be Sealed.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—Postmaster General Bissell has issued an order stating that sealed packages, other than letters in their usual and ordinary form, are not allowed to be dispatched from the United States to Canada, even though postage is prepaid at the full letter rate. This is to prevent a form of smuggling of small articles.

A Cautious Postmaster.

PORTLAND, Me., Oct. 27.—The postoffice and general store at East Deering was entered by boring holes about the lock of the door. The burglar could not find any postage stamps or money, as the postmaster takes all the government property home with him every night. Some cigars and small articles were carried away.

Crew Rescued.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Oct. 27.—Schooner Elias Runyon of Perth Amboy, N. J., started a plank when off Point Judith, began to sink rapidly and was abandoned by the crew, in small boats. The crew were picked up shortly afterward by the schooner Henry Sutton.

WHISKEY TRUST

Will Start Out on a Bran New Plan.

WHISKEY MADE FROM CORN AND MOLASSES.

Capital Stock Will Be Started at $5,000,000.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—Papers were filed at Trenton, in the secretary of state's office, yesterday, which indicate the formation of a new whisky trust. The papers comprise the articles of incorporation of a concern to be known as the Great White Spirit company, with a paid-up capital of $5,000,000, the total authorized capital being limited by the charter to $50,000,000.

The principal office and place of business of the committee outside of the state of New Jersey will be Boston, but it will carry on business in various other states and territories of the United States. The $5,000,000 capital stock of the company is divided into 50,000 shares of the par value of $100 each. Of that stock $500,000 is divided into 5000 shares of the par value of $100 each, and is to be first preferred stock and to be known as "guaranteed" stock and $2,000,000 is to be divided into 20,000 shares of the par value of $100 each, which shall be second preferred stock and be called "preferred" stock, and the balance of stock, to wit, $2,500,000, is to be divided into 25,000 shares of the par value of $100 each, and shall be called "general" or "common stock." The guaranteed and preferred stocks are to receive 8 per cent per annum, cumulative; after Jan. 1, 1895, provision is made for retiring the guaranteed stock at $110. The company is to commence business on the 29th.

The Organizers and Corporators

of the company are Robert H. Dillingham of East Orange, N. J., and David M. Ripley and Edward G. Maturin of this city. Mr. Maturin is described in the articles as the subscriber for 5000 shares of the guaranteed stock, 20,000 shares of preferred stock and 24,800 shares of the common stock. Mr. Dillingham and Mr. Ripley are put down as holding 100 shares each of the common stock.

One of the men interested in the organization of the company said that it represented a combination of the New England distillers with certain New York men who had retired from the present Whisky trust. The new company, he said, owned the patents for a new process for making spirits out of molasses, and they would have distilleries in which spirits would be made from corn and molasses alongside of each other.

To develop and carry out that departure in making whisky, he said the company had acquired large sugar properties in the West Indies, and for that purpose the company was authorized to buy steamships. Two such vessels, he said, had been already bought.

Plunged to Her Doom.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—The captain of the German bark Rebecca reports that at 3 o'clock yesterday morning when off Ilfracombe he sighted a large steamer flying signals of distress. Soon afterward the steamer went down bow foremost. The crew could be seen running about on her deck and their cries for help could be heard distinctly. The Rebecca could do nothing to save them as she was running under bare poles before a furious gale. The name of the lost steamer is not known.

A Clever Robbery.

OMAHA, Oct. 27.—The fact was made public yesterday afternoon that the safety deposit vaults section of the Omaha National bank had been robbed, and in so dexterous a manner that no clew of the manner in which the work was done is obtainable. Large sums of money have been taken. The bank officials offer no explanation other than to declare it is not due to the carelessness of the bank employes.

Didn't Work Well.

NEWPORT, R. I., Oct. 27.—Cruiser Cincinnati fired a Howell torpedo yesterday for practice. After running 400 yards it went to the bottom, and has not since been found. It also leaked out yesterday that the trial with the Howell on the Detroit ended the same way, and divers are still searching for it. Both torpedoes acting the same way is causing much unfavorable comment in naval circles.
